COURSE OFFERINGS BOOKLET

ADMISSION TO HONORS COURSES

Honors courses are designed for Honors College members; however, any TTU student with a GPA of 3.0 or better is eligible to enroll in an Honors section as space permits.

For more information, or to request a seat in an Honors section, please contact the Honors College: McClellan Hall, Room 103 | (806) 742-1828 | honors.advising@ttu.edu

GRADUATION WITH HONORS DESIGNATIONS

Students must complete 24 hours in Honors coursework to graduate from Texas Tech University with the transcript designation “with Honors from the Honors College.”

A student who wishes to graduate with the transcript designation “with Highest Honors from the Honors College” must complete an Honors thesis and 30 hours of Honors coursework. Permission from the Honors College is required before beginning the Honors thesis.

Students entering the Honors College prior to Fall 2017 must maintain a pure grade point average (GPA) of 3.25 to remain in the Honors College and graduate with either of the above Honors designations. Students entering the Honors College in Fall 2017 or later must maintain a TTU GPA of 3.5 to remain in the Honors College and graduate with either of the above Honors designations.

Students intending to graduate with either designation must file an “Intent to Graduate” form with the Honors College one year prior to the graduation date. Honors College designations are listed on the transcript and the diploma. These are in addition to other distinctions graduates may earn, such as Latin Honors (e.g., Summa cum laude, Magna cum laude, and Cum laude).

HOW TO USE THIS BOOKLET

Course information, such as days and times, are subject to change.

The core curriculum information listed in this booklet reflects the university’s list of core curriculum requirements, effective fall 2014 and following.

Honors student:

Registration for Spring 2023 courses is approaching! Along those lines, the Honors advising process will commence soon. In addition to reading this email completely and carefully, we also encourage you to consult our Honors Advising webpages (honors.ttu.edu >> Academics & Enrichment >> Honors Advising).

Please see the dates below for information relevant to your classification by hours, earned as of August 2022. We recommend that you check your TTU unofficial transcript on Raiderlink now to ensure that all of the credit hours you believe you should have posted to your transcript, because these are the hours on which your advising classification will be based. Please contact the Registrar's Office to have any discrepancies corrected as soon as possible. As well, we strongly encourage you to make contact with your primary major advisor prior to submitting an Honors online Permit Request Form and/or registering for classes.

All Honors students can expect to receive an email directed to you specifically containing detailed instructions on what actions to take in preparation for advising/permit approval. Please do not make plans or assumptions based on emails that your friends or classmates receive, as their instructions may be different from yours. Remember to check your Clutter or Junk folders, in case our correspondence is directed there.

Appointment Scheduling Information:

Honors advising appointments will be conducted at McClellan Hall (with masks strongly encouraged). If you are required to meet with an Honors advisor, or would simply like to do so, please use our online scheduling system, Booksy (<https://booksy.com/en-us/625228-ttu-honors-college-other-37111-lubbock>), to set an appointment time.

- Honors new current/transfer Honors students (admitted to the College for Spring 2023) will be contacted and required to schedule an advising appointment with an advisor. An Honors advising hold will be placed until the student schedules an appointment via Booksy.
- Honors students who are not making steady progress towards Honors course requirements will be contacted and required to schedule an advising appointment. An Honors advising hold will be placed until the student schedules an appointment via Booksy.
- Honors students in their first year at TTU who are absent from their LCG on the day of the advising presentation (October 4 or 5) will be contacted and required to schedule an advising appointment. An Honors advising hold will be placed until the student schedules an appointment via Booksy.
- Honors students who are on track to graduate in May 2024 (or August 2024) are strongly encouraged, though not required, to schedule an advising appointment. No Honors advising hold should be placed.
- Honors students who are pursuing 2+2 pre-health prerequisites and intend to complete Honors requirements on an accelerated path before application to professional schools are strongly encouraged, though not required, to schedule an advising appointment. No Honors advising hold should be placed.
- All other Honors students are invited to make an appointment to discuss Honors-related advising questions. No Honors advising hold should be placed.

If you have questions related to Spring 2023 and/or Summer 2023 course selection – or other immediate issues with which you need assistance from an advisor prior to your Honors registration date – we encourage you to contact us via email, at honors.advising@ttu.edu or to a specific Honors advisor.

Permit Requests and Registration Information:

All university classes for Spring 2023 should be loaded on Raiderlink on October 3rd. Honors sections offered during the spring semester are listed here in this booklet (which is subject to revision as Honors sections are added, cancelled, or otherwise modified).

The online Permit Request Form (PRF) will be posted soon on the Honors Advising webpage associated with your classification by hours. You may NOT submit an online PRF prior to the date and time outlined for your classification. If your form arrives before the appropriate PRF start time, it will be deleted and your permit request(s) will not be processed.

Please note that Visual Schedule Builder will not always pull in Honors course sections accurately. We recommend you use the Plan Ahead Tool in the Add/Drop classes portal or use the Section Search Tool to build your schedule manually.

On your online Permit Request Form, you must provide a full tentative Spring 2023 course schedule, including your intended Honors and non-Honors courses (or the PRF will not be processed).

Along those lines, it's perfectly fine if you make changes to your overall schedule later; you will not be locked into the tentative plan that you share with your PRF.

Once you successfully submit an online PRF, you will receive a copy of your completed form via email. If you do not receive this auto-response, please contact Kelsey.Kimzey@ttu.edu so she can make sure your PRF was received by our staff.

You can find a sample degree plan/course sequence for your major in the TTU Undergraduate Catalog (catalog.ttu.edu) or find course requirements in your DegreeWorks portal.

As with previous advising cycles, permits are only needed for selected, high-demand Honors sections and not for all Honors sections offered in Spring 2023. Please consult the contents of this course offerings booklet to see if Honors sections in which you are interested require a permit to enroll.

Permits will be required for enrollment in Honors Summit Experience sections (for Spring 2023) and will be issued first to May 2023 and August 2023 Honors graduates ONLY. After our upcoming graduates have been accommodated, remaining Summit permits will be given with preference to other students graduating within the year.

Please do not contact advisors to ask about permit requests before the stated date and time when we'll send notifications about permit issuance. (See the detailed instructions for your classification above.)

If a permit for a high-demand Honors section is issued to you and you do not plan on registering for that course, please notify an Honors advisor so that the space may be given to another student.

Check your current holds and verify your permits under the "My Enrollment" tab of your Student Dashboard prior to your registration date.

Always include your R# in any correspondence with a TTU advisor so that we can help you more efficiently.

Waitlists:

For high-demand Honors sections which require a permit to enroll...

The Honors College manages the waitlists for such courses. The number of permits issued will match the number of seats designated for the section. Once all permits are issued, any student who requests a permit will be placed on the waitlist.

IF spaces open up in full courses, the College will contact students on the waitlist one at a time, in the order they are kept on the waitlist. We will always contact you at your TTU email address. If you receive an email from us notifying you that a space has opened up for you, the email will request your confirmation that you still want to take the course and have room for it in your schedule. Thus, it is essential that you check your TTU email daily to watch for important communications from us and other departments.

We work our waitlists through the 1st add deadline on the 4th class day each semester—in conjunction with the timeline policies for Raiderlink waitlists.

PLEASE NOTE: There are occasions when the number of students enrolled in these sections as reflected on Raiderlink does not match the number of permits issued for the Honors section. In these cases, there are students who have recently received a permit for this section and have not (yet) enrolled in it. They have a certain timeframe to use the permit; otherwise it will go to the next student(s) at the top of that waitlist which is managed by the College.

Do not contact instructors of courses for overrides, as they do not track enrollments or know whether a waitlist exists for the Honors section. For our high-demand Honors sections, we will not unfairly skip over students on a waitlist to put others into the course ahead of them, even if a professor approves you for her/his course.

For Honors sections not noted as high-demand which do NOT require a permit for an Honors student to enroll...

Raiderlink, not the Honors College, manages the waitlists for such courses. Once such an Honors section fills, you should be able to add your name to the waitlist through the Course Registration function on Raiderlink.

If your name moves to the top of the waitlist, Raiderlink will trigger an email which notifies you that you have a certain amount of time in order to enroll in the section. As noted above, it is essential that you check your TTU email daily.

Be sure to secure an alternate class as soon as possible...

When a student is on either an in-house Honors waitlist for a high-demand course OR a Raiderlink waitlist for any other course, the student should immediately register for an alternate, non-Honors section of the same course OR another alternate course that would be acceptable for degree sequencing. It is imperative to be registered for an alternate course as soon as possible in the event that the student's name never comes up on the in-house Honors or Raiderlink waitlist.

Please let us know if questions arise. You are welcome to reach out to an individual Honors team-member or to us at honors.advising@ttu.edu.

We look forward to serving you in your preparations for the Spring 2023 semester, and beyond!

~ Your Honors Core Advising Team

SPRING 2023 HONORS COURSES - ALL

- Courses with a green notation do not require a permit for an Honors student to enroll. When non-permit sections fill, students will use Raiderlink to add their names to the section's waitlist.
- Courses with a yellow notation require a student to submit a Permit Request Form (PRF). PRFs must be approved by an Honors advisor. For information on how and when to submit your PRF, see the Honors Advising webpage. When permit-required sections fill, the section will be listed in red. Students submitting a PRF for a filled section will be added to our internal waitlist. If a space becomes available, the student next on the internal waitlist is notified by their TTU email.
- Courses with an orange notation require a student to submit a separate application to enroll in the course. Course application information can be found in the course's description or at Honors Course Information.

Humankind desires it, literature and journalism document and create a sense of it, and multi-million dollar industries promote it: ADVENTURE! This unique course offers you creative, critical, practical, and strategic insight and experience in analyzing and producing media centered around the concept and popularized notion of adventure by placing you in the middle of it! The course's primary learning and application takes place across several Saturdays, over one full weekend, and during an intensive Spring Break outdoor lab while bikepacking and producing documentary and travel media in southern New Mexico's Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument, a land steeped in the history and culture of the southwest, is geologically and geographically unique, and prime for outdoor active travel and lifestyle. You will engage in various hands-on, creative media storytelling practices that communicate the natural world, a culture that continues to shape it, and an experience that defines modern-day exploration and adventure.

No one can teach you to be creative. No one needs to. We are – each and every one of us – creative by virtue of being human. But we can learn to be better at creative work by understanding the creative process. Through readings, group and individual projects, and seminar discussion, you will develop a vision of the creative process, learn to identify blocks to that process, and acquire techniques for getting you unblocked. This course is not just about art but about creative thinking and habits that are applicable to all human endeavors.

Analysis of foreign and ethnic cinema as an expression of human values and creativity viewed through the lens of distinctive culture or cultures.

This interdisciplinary seminar proposes an introduction to the study of European culture through the masterpieces of cinema. We will look at some of the most significant social, political, cultural, and intellectual developments in 20th and 21st century Europe as seen through the major works of European directors. Consistent with the Honors College’s philosophy, we will consider their films interdisciplinarily: both aesthetically, as works of art in and of themselves, but also as ‘windows’ (distorting and enriching at the same time) through which we can have access to the world that these works come from, and to their social, political, intellectual, and artistic contexts.

Prerequisite: To be admitted to the Honors thesis program, students must be enrolled in the Honors College, be in the final two semesters of their degree program and file an application for approval. Thesis courses are not offered during the summer terms. Honors students seeking an application will should contact Beth Scheckel at Beth.Scheckel@ttu.edu. The deadline to complete the application process is the first day of class each fall and spring semester. Students should begin the application process by mid-semester of the term preceding enrollment in the first thesis course. Students wanting to apply and enroll in HONS 3300-H01 for this Fall 2022 should contact Beth immediately to begin the application process.

An Honors thesis is a long formal research paper or written creative work that conforms to the journal publishing standards in a chosen field. The Honors thesis program consists of two semester-long research and writing courses, HONS 3300, followed by HONS 4300. Students do not meet in a classroom, but instead work independently, and in concert with a student-selected thesis director, and the HONS 3300/4300 instructor. The thesis director must be a Texas Tech University faculty member. With guidance, students work through a series of steps from the development of an argument to a completed thesis. In these two courses, students master the following skills: note-taking, effective outlining, integrating primary and secondary sources, document formatting, utilizing constructive feedback, argumentative and/or creative writing, and revising. Students who successfully complete an Honors thesis are eligible to will graduate from the Honors College with the distinction of Highest Honors.

Since 2008, The Marvel Cinematic Universe Films are the template for the modern blockbuster. Marvel Studios created a shared universe that includes feature films, network television, and several streaming series. The MCU films have generated over four billion domestically showing just how iconic Marvel characters are. Avengers Endgame is one of the top grossing films of all time. Long before Disney bought the company in 2009, Marvel had a long history dating back to the pulp publishing industry of the nineteen thirties when their name was Timely Comics. In the early nineteen sixties, Stan Lee, Jack Kirby, Steve Ditko, and others created the Marvel Universe that is so iconic today. This HONS Summit studies the history of Marvel, key artists and writers, Marvel films and television (including Marvel Studios and the Cinematic Universe) and some of the important stories in the Marvel pantheon. As a class, we will discuss why so many of Marvel's 5,000 + characters have become part of our modern-day mythology. Marvel is one of the longest running shared universes in history and this class celebrates that. This course is reading intensive and has mature content.

Is failure something "socially constructed" or inherent to human nature? Or both? How does a significant experience of failure affect one's personality, character, and worldview in the long run? Why do great human projects (democracies, for example) start failing one day, after they've been successful for a long time? What is perfectionism? In this complex, multidisciplinary summit we will address these and other similar questions. Using a mix of philosophy, fiction and non-fiction prose, plays, and art house cinema, we will seek to make better sense of failure as a fundamental human experience. We will be studying closely such works as Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," Milos Forman's "Amadeus," Fyodor Dostoevsky's "Notes from Underground," and Martin Scorsese's "Taxi Driver."

This course seeks to chart the historical and political development of the Arab Israeli conflict by analyzing key events and controversies which have shaped the struggle. The course takes an in depth look at the peoples involved, the changing situations on the ground and the ramifications the conflict has for the world beyond the regional borders. The course divides the conflict into four main stages. The first is a proto-nationalist stage that examines the Zionist and Arab nationalist movements as they grew from ideologies to full-fledged political entities from the 1880s to 1917. The second stage 1917-1948, from the Balfour declaration to the creation of the state of Israel, sees two nationalist movements competing for the same land. The third stage, from 1948-1987, can be understood as a state against state conflict which sees the state of Israel engaged in a conflict with other nations. The fourth stage, identified as Israel against political Islam, shows the conflict being waged not only between Israel and other nation states, but against armed Islamic political movements such as Hamas, Hezbollah, and Islamic Jihad. Time is also dedicated to broader ethical issues of academic and community representations of the Arab Israeli conflict, and the nature of scholarly and community authority.

The horror genre is consistently one of the most widespread types of storytelling whether in film, literature, sequential art, television, or videogames. Long-ignored writers like H.P. Lovecraft are now in the Library of America series and there is renewed interest in the works of Arthur Machen, Clark Ashton Smith, and Robert W. Chambers. Stephen King is one of the most successful and widely read writers in history. Horror films still make money year after year and television shows like American Horror Story are among the most popular. With so much real horror in the world, why do we still love the horror genre? This course takes a multidisciplinary approach to studying horror. It includes examining early cosmic literary horror, novel to film adaptation, horror related music, and how horror is used in sequential art. In addition, we will study the history of forensic science in true crime and try to understand how certain cases were solved or remain unsolved. We will also look at the history of medicine and certain historically associated horrors. This course tries to answer the questions: What purpose does horror serve in our lives and why do we like being scared? Students will have the opportunity to make their own horror film as their final project. This course has mature content. Please note this course is reading intensive.

This seminar examines some of the basic issues involved in the interplay that exists in our modern society between science and the general society in which it functions. Taught by a practicing scientist and constantly questioning historian, our focus is to dwell on some of the scientific topics that have historically dominated science/societal interactions, such as: What is science? What is the difference between science and technology? What contributions do scientists make to society and how does society respond to science? To what extent should society set the agenda for science? To what extent should science take social and political issues into account in their research programs? How should we evaluate conflicts between scientific findings and religious beliefs? What are the ethical implications of scientific developments such as the potential to reshape the human genome, to modify food crops and domestical animals genetically, or to use fetal stem cells to cure diseases?

This class is intended for both science and non-science students. The instructors of this course take the approach that scientific explanations for natural phenomena which have been proposed by scientists and evaluated by their peers (and which have been used repeatedly to create the technology that we take for granted in our daily life) provide the best understanding of the natural world, but there will be many opportunities for discussion, challenge, and interaction over all these topics.

Designed to introduce students to life-long information literacy skills and establish the tools for effective and efficient research in a university library. Objectives are based on the ACRL Standards for Information Literacy for Higher Education. Honors students will be required to critically analyze and synthesize information resources to be included in an annotated bibliography and literature review on a topic of their choosing. Case studies will be used in class to discuss issues of academic integrity and ethical use of information.

Note: MATH 3342 and MATH 4342 cannot both be counted toward a mathematics major or minor.

Prerequisite: Math 2450

This course is designed to cover topics from mathematical statistics that are of interest to students from engineering and/or the sciences. Topics will include descriptive statistics, elementary probability, random variables and their distributions, mean, variance, parameter estimation, hypothesis testing, regression, and analysis of variance. In addition, students will get hands-on experience in the process of experimentation, data collection, and analysis via a group project where students will propose an experiment, get approval, design the experiment and data collection methodology/protocols, run/conduct the experiment and gather data, then analyze the data and draw conclusions. This will all be presented in a written report as well as an oral presentation before their peers.

Introduction to personal finance, including goal setting, cash management, credit, insurance, taxes, housing, investment alternatives, and retirement plans. To better understand how individuals and families make financial decisions to meet their goals, reading assignments and discussion will focus on topics that are both relevant and timely. Class time will be spent collaboratively learning about the financial marketplace and behavioral tendencies, which form the environment in which people make financial decisions.

Current issues such as financial literacy, time preferences, investment in human capital, behavioral finance, and generational differences will be explored. Discussion will arise from the readings assigned that focus on current issues, often found in popular press such as the Wall Street Journal, USA Today, and Kiplinger's Magazine. It will also come from interesting and sometimes controversial new research related to how and why people think about money as they do. We all know that our financial decisions are not always rational, as assumed in economic theory. However, behavior research from economic, psychological, and socio-cultural perspectives can inform us regarding financial decision making.

All people are performers. Every day we "present" a different side of ourselves to the various persons with whom we come in contact. We are all skilled at a kind of "deception" which allows us to transform our voices and our bodies as needed to get what we want. As children, we learn what works and what doesn't work in our interactions with adults. These become ingrained in us. In this course, we remind ourselves what our different sides consist of, we learn strategies for acquiring our needs, we learn to relate to each other, to sympathize and even empathize with people different from ourselves. We become better citizens in a global society. In the study of acting we learn to be better sociologists, psychologists, public speakers, athletes, managers, anthropologists, parents, children, and friends. In short, we learn much more about the human condition in order to reflect it to others.
