

PEGASUS Learning Community

Chitwood/Weymouth Residence Halls

Learning Communities at TTU are specially designated floors on which students live with other students sharing their academic and personal interests. Students are provided programming focused on those interests to increase access to faculty, academic staff and students pursuing common goals. There is no additional cost for participating in Learning Communities.

National research shows that involvement in Learning Communities contributes to:

- Increased GPA & class attendance
- More likely to graduate in four years
- Greater involvement on campus and in professional organizations
- Easier transition from high school to college
- Development of personal relationships with other students in the classroom

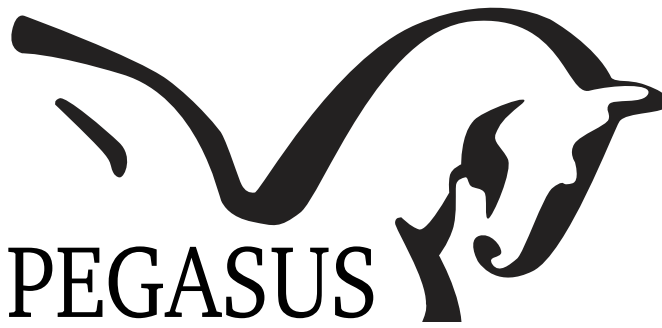

The PEGASUS Learning Community provides a unique experience for First Generation College (FGC) students participating in the TTU Advising Center's PEGASUS Program to live together in an environment supporting their academic, personal and professional success.

Students have opportunities to:

- Identify common challenges for first-year students and those unique to First Generation College students
- Learn about campus and community resources and how they can be of support
- Receive guidance from upperclass students
- Cultivate lasting relationships with faculty and peers
- Attend specialized social and academic activities
- Create study groups and motivate each other to attend class, complete assignments and exchange ideas

First-time freshman students in the PEGASUS Learning Community can also participate in a Freshman Interest Group (FIG), in which up to 20 students are enrolled in a common set of course sections during the Fall semester.
