

Texas Tech University
PreLaw

Dear Student,

My name is Jordan Ryan and I am a Lead Academic Advisor with the University Advising office here at Texas Tech. I have been serving Texas Tech students for 6 years as an advisor, instructor, and now as the coordinator for the TTU Pre-Law Program. Student success is my passion and I eagerly look forward to helping any student at Texas Tech navigate their best path to law school.

It is important to note that Pre-Law is not a major. Pre-Law is a program sponsored by the Division of Undergraduate Education designed to assist students in their preparation for law school. All prospective law school students are invited to participate. Too, I like to think of Pre-Law as being a state of mind in which students strive to become the best possible version of themselves so that they can become upstanding citizens and lawyers. Earnest students with a "Pre-Law state of mind" participate actively in their own education, eagerly step out of their comfort zone to overcome difficult challenges, and behave ethically with honor and integrity.

If you are new to Texas Tech or want to become more active in with the Pre-Law program, I would encourage you attend any of our upcoming events, which you can view on our calendar. These events are free to attend and, most importantly, they will give you a glimpse into the rigors and rewards that await you as a future lawyer.

I aim to be as genuine and accessible to all students; thus, do not hesitate to contact me if you would like to schedule an appointment with me to talk about your future as a lawyer. Wreck 'em!

Sincerely,

Jordan Ryan, M.A., M. Ed
