Environmental Economics at the TTU Center Seville

Students will have an opportunity to learn about the impact of U.S. and European climate policies on the production, consumption, and trade in goods and services, as well as the environmental impact of current economic patterns, since the economic decisions of governments, firms, and households affect climate change through changes in production, consumption and transport related emissions. There will be an emphasis on environmental policies in the European countries, including Spain, that address the issue of climate change by reducing emissions using various economic instruments and encouraging renewable energy generation based on growing demand for geothermal, solar, and wind power.
