WHAT IS THE TEXAS EPFP?

Texas EPFP is a 10-month (August to May) professional development experience. The program consists of asynchronous content, synchronous meetings (twice monthly), and two in-person sessions: a leadership retreat in Austin, Texas in fall and a multi-day Washington Policy Seminar (WPS) in Spring held by IEL in Washington, D.C.

Texas EPFP brings people and ideas together through a variety of on-site learning, sharing and electronic networking and dialogue. Fellows will develop a policy project related to their interest at the nexus of policy and educational leadership. Policy projects are guided by the goal of having an applied impact for the betterment of educational opportunities for our state's children and youth. In addition, the Washington Policy Seminar serves to increase fellows' knowledge of national policy issues and processes and gives them a chance to explore the impact of national policies on their work.

Locally and nationally, through EPFP, employers and sponsors are rewarded with better informed and more skillful leaders. With a critical mass of EPFP graduates in almost every state constitutes a strong network for education reform.

When applying for the Texas EPFP, please consider the extra demands on your time this fellowship will ask in light of your current professional and personal commitments. Full participation is expected of all fellows during the duration of the program. There is a $2,500 fee for participation; many of our fellows offset costs by employer or organization sponsorship (either full or partial). Some costs are not covered in the fee, such as travel to and from the in-person sessions.

THE NATIONAL EPFP PROGRAM

EPFP was created by the Institute for Educational Leadership in 1964 with funding from the Ford Foundation as a response to the explosive growth of the federal role in education under the new Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) and related Great Society legislation. The transformed federal role in education generated a need for education professionals in the states who understood the content of federal legislation, the policy process and the complex changes state systems were undergoing as a result. The present-day challenges in state and national education add even greater urgency to the development of sophisticated, broad-minded and well-networked education leaders in the state of Texas.

EPFP is defined by local flexibility within a coherent national structure. Three program strands – leadership, public policy and professional networking – organize the learning in EPFP. This arrangement enables fellows to use their work settings as the context for examining leadership and policy issues important to them and to their organizations. Texas joins other state sites, including California, North Carolina, South Carolina, Ohio, Georgia, Michigan, and the District of Columbia; learn more at <https://epfp.iel.org/>.

More than 10,000 EPFP alumni now work and lead in all sectors of American life: K-12 and higher education organizations; local, state and federal government agencies; public policy groups; foundations and nonprofits; and corporations. This extensive alumni network offers current fellows and graduates rich access to professional information, expertise and career growth.

PURPOSE: TEXAS EPFP PROGRAM

The purpose of the TX-EPFP is to strengthen and develop a network of community, civic and educational leaders focused on the creation and implementation of informed and equitable education policy in the state of Texas through policy knowledge, situated leadership skills, and adept networking.
