MWF 12-12:50PM

Matt Hooleymatt.hooley@ttu.edu

English/Philosophy 312B

Prerequisite: ENGL 1301 and 1302.

We understand and organize literature by drawing boundary lines. Boundaries between genres, canons, and methods. Boundaries between national literatures, between literary and non-literary arts, between literature and literary theory. This course will survey these boundary lines, and teach you how to trespass over and across them. We'll rehearse essential skills of critical reading and writing, familiarize ourselves with basic theoretical schools and practices, and read texts (drawn broadly across national/generic/periodic divides) which explore the social and political risks and rewards of trespassing itself.

Mary Mullenmary.mullen@ttu.edu

English/Philosophy 421

Prerequisite: ENGL 1301 and 1302.

This course will teach critical writing about literature, and just as importantly, give you practice critical writing. You will learn important key terms in literary analysis, practice close reading, and acquire strategies for making interesting, convincing, and unified arguments about literary texts. We will discuss how to move from particular moments in literature to interpretations of literature; how to study literature in ways that help us better understand culture, history, and politics; as well as how to organize sentences, paragraphs, and essays effectively. Students will be expected to attend all class meetings and participate in class discussions, write informal responses to the reading, write and revise two essays, and take a midterm and final. There is a strict attendance policy that begins the first day of classes.

Texts: We will read diverse literary genres from different historical periods and geographic settings, including work by Kazuo Ishiguro, Edgar Allan Poe, George Eliot, Nadine Gordimer, William Shakespeare, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, T.S. Eliot, Langston Hughes, Oscar Wilde, David Henry Hwang, and Tim O'Brien.
