Graduating Student Survey for May 2015 Institutional Research August, 2015

Undergraduate students who were expected to graduate in May 2015 were sent an invitation to participate in a comprehensive survey for rating and commenting on their academic program and university services. They also tell us of their plans for the future. Following are the summary results.

INTRODUCTION TO REPORTS OF COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY RESULTS for the Expanded Graduation Student Survey for May 2015

Since 1991, Institutional Research (IR) has conducted a survey of undergraduates just before graduation. In 2005-6 the colleges added their own surveys at commencement. The "Expanded Graduating Student Survey" combines the IR and college surveys. In addition, after a review of the requirements and recommendations of various accrediting agencies, the survey was expanded in December 2012 in anticipation of future data needs.

The following resources are available:

- 1. General Results a 9-page report by university and by each college highlighting student characteristics, ratings, and other tabular data.
- 2. Chart Supplement a 2-page set of histograms by university and each college for 25 ratings questions.
- 3. Supplemental Surveys information from questions exclusive to the colleges of Agriculture, Architecture, Business, and Media & Communication.
- 4. Individual Outcomes Listings Employment and continuing education plans by college, department, and major.
- 5. Self-Reported Contact Information name/address/phone/email listings by college and major. (Not all respondents provided contact data.)
- 6. Comments remarks by a college's students regarding: (1) academic departments, (2) the quality of students & academic standards, (3) cheating and plagiarism, (4) career advising, (5) the job search, (6) assistance with graduate education, (7) academic-related activities outside of class, (8) helping faculty with research, (9) what major, if any, they might have preferred, (10) what students liked best about Texas Tech, (11) other comments, and (12) a supplemental question from Arts & Sciences regarding exceptional faculty and classes. (All remarks are unedited except for computer spell-check.)
- 7. A University/College Comparison of Selected Results a side-by-side listing of key data by university and by college.

Two types of reports, contact information (#5) and the comments (#6), are not included in public publications of survey results available on the Institutional Research web site, but these are available to authorized administrators.

Notes:

The major is self-reported.

The students expected to graduate in a given commencement are surveyed prior to graduation, but a small number of these will not actually complete their degree until a later commencement. The response rate is relative to the invitations to prospective graduates and not to actual graduates.

Rating scales are from 1 to 5, unless otherwise specified. Higher numbers are better. Salaries are from a selection list in $10k ranges.

The employer name, type of business, and job title are all edited for consistency in terminology.

The continuing education level abbreviations represent Certificate / Associate degree / an additional Bachelor's / a Master's / a Doctorate / or Professional degree (law, theology, or medicine). Those planning on multiple degrees may list all that they are anticipating.

Those continuing their education may be uncertain about what they will study and where they will be located in the future. Multiple possibilities are listed unless there are too many to list separately. It is typical for some proposals for multiple degrees to appear overly ambitious.

Having some individuals list extremely large amounts of college debt is assumed to be an exaggeration for editorial purposes, and a reasonable cut-off is set so as not to distort the overall statistics.

The Near-Future Plans section is divided into two parts to meet external reporting requirements.

For data processing reasons, a variety of place-holders (N/A, -, ?, blank) are used to indicate missing data.

Not included here are reports for individual academic departments. Such reports are produced periodically using a larger amount of data from multiple commencements.

Comments regarding the library, computer facilities, and administration service units are not reported here. Best-faculty tabulations are updated separately. Multi-year comparative reports down to the department level are also done periodically for surveys of Graduate School students and of undergraduate alumni at one, three, and seven years after graduation.

Interpretation examples: In most colleges family support is most important. An exception is in the DUAL column where family has about half the importance of loans. In ED, credit cards have about one-tenth the impact of family support. VPA students don't use credit cards a lot, but they use them more than others.

Benefits Justify the Cost?

Yes, it is definitely worth the cost.

It is probably worth it.

No, it is definitely not worth the money.
