This strategic plan is the result of extensive consultation with, and input from, many Museum of Texas Tech University stakeholders and staff. The Museum’s appreciation is extended to everyone who has contributed to this plan.
Executive Director's message

The Museum of Texas Tech University is a unique resource for both the University and the diverse community of Lubbock and West Texas. With collections and partnerships that span the globe, and using best practices in lifelong learning, the Museum enhances understanding and appreciation of the natural world and of human achievement and creativity. As well as serving audiences today, the Museum is training the next generations of museum professionals and leaders who will define museums and heritage management of the future.

The Museum should be an inviting, stimulating, and sometimes challenging forum for exploration of what it is that makes us human and of the processes that continue to shape our world and universe. The Museum should be a gateway for all audiences to our heritage and our future. For the University, the Museum should be the most user-friendly portal to the creativity and research that is happening on campus.

Through engaging campus and community, the Museum of Texas Tech University aspires to be the model for what a great university museum should be. This strategic plan will empower us on our journey to that end.

Gary Morgan PhD
Executive Director
Introduction: The role of a great university museum

The Museum of Texas Tech University has its origins as the West Texas Museum, established in 1929. Today the Museum serves both the University and the diverse community of greater Lubbock and West Texas, and has connections that span the world. To be a great museum, the Museum of Texas Tech University must embody the best in museum practice as recognized for 21st century museums and as is proper for an American Alliance of Museums accredited museum. To be a great university museum, the Museum must recognize its role – a unique role - in advancing on the strategic priorities of Texas Tech University and in linking the University to its diverse community. The University (‘Campus’) and the Community are the key stakeholders of the Museum of Texas Tech University.

Texas Tech University has defined its strategic ambitions in the strategic plan, Making It Possible, which identifies five strategic priorities:

- Increasing enrollment and promoting student success
- Strengthening academic quality and reputation
- Expanding and enhancing research and creative scholarship
- Furthering outreach and engagement
- Increasing and maximizing resources.

The Museum of Texas Tech University can contribute to advancing all of the University’s five strategic priorities and has a particular role in:

- Training the best Museum Science and Heritage Management students in America;
- Enhancing and expanding the student experience for as many Texas Tech students as possible to prepare them for their life after university;
- Delivering, supporting, and cultivating expanded understanding of world class research;
- Enhancing understanding of informal and lifelong learning in self-directed settings such as museums;
- Providing the most user-friendly contact point between Campus and Community;
- Engaging with both key stakeholder groups to enrich the lives of the people of Lubbock, West Texas and the South Plains through a diverse range of exhibitions and other public programs.

Stakeholder engagement for a great university museum should be seen as a continuum between Campus and Community. The Museum must engage with Campus; it must engage with Community; and it must facilitate engagement between Campus and Community.

Museum (M) equals engagement (e) by Campus (C) and by Community (C).

| Collections | The general scope of the collections for the Museum of Texas Tech University is the greater American Southwest and similar geographic regions in time and space; the Natural Science Research Lab retains its scope of collections prior to merging with the Museum as global diversity. The Museum's collections are of national and international significance. |

| Research | Research carried out or supported by the Museum relates to its extraordinary collections in arts, culture, heritage, humanities, and natural and earth sciences. Each research unit sets its scope of research guided by such elements as biodiversity, cultural group, evolution, geography, medium, taxonomy, time period, or similar aspects. |

| Learning | The Museum plans and delivers public learning experiences in any area related to its collections and to the disciplines of its research and that of its partners. |
Values Statement

The Museum of Texas Tech University values are:

- Public and professional service
- Stewardship of cultural and natural heritage
- Educational and research excellence
- Innovation and experimentation
- Academic and intellectual freedom
- Diversity of collections and communities
- Sustainability and viability

Strategic Priorities

Highlights

The strategic plan, Engaging Campus and Community M=eC², documents the Priorities and Objectives of the Museum of Texas Tech University for 2016 to 2020 as identified at the beginning of that period. A strategic plan is not a static document. It should be subject to continual review and, as appropriate, refinement in order to be responsive to opportunity and changing stakeholder expectations.

The following areas are identified as deserving particular attention, in order to empower the Museum to deliver on its true potential to be the leading university museum in the country. The ‘leading university museum’ should be defined not only by the quality of a museum’s facilities and collections, but more importantly by the range and relevance of its programs, the active links between student and public education, research/scholarship and audience enjoyment, and the seamless connection between Campus and Community.

In the 2016-2020 period the Museum will ...

- Maintain and improve on its core strengths including collection care, object-based research and the Museum Science and Heritage Management (MSHM) graduate program
- Grow its lifelong learning capacities including:
  - Enhanced educational programming and resources
  - Better evaluation of its audiences and impacts
  - Research into informal, self-directed and object-based learning
  - More programs for under-served and special needs groups, and in early childhood learning
- Grow its engagement with communities and campus including:
  - Establishing an exhibit program that serves as a portal to Texas Tech University’s research, creativity and community engagement
• More outreach into community and campus through products delivered outside of the Museum’s walls
• Supporting a wider range of community events
• Making the museum more welcoming and responsive to community and campus

Grow its role as a societal and campus forum exploring topical issues of importance to contemporary society

Grow its programs for students (the 18-28 year old demographic) outside of the MSHM program by better providing things that students want to see and do

Grow its cross-disciplinary programming including:
• Multi-disciplinary STEM\(^1\) products
• STEAM\(^2\) fusion products (where art and the humanities meet science)
• Injecting an element of ‘surprise’ into the galleries and museum experience

Grow its capacity and professionalism in development/fundraising via professional development staff, links with TTU Institutional Advancement, and in partnership with the Museum of TTU Association

Plan for future needs via:
• A Strategic Asset Management Plan for the Museum
• Advancing Master Planning for the Museum building
• Advancing Master Planning for the Lubbock Lake Landmark facilities

More effectively communicate the value of its collections, research and public programs to all stakeholders across Campus and Community
