Kevin W. Sightler

Biographical Profile

Kevin Sightler is director of substantive change at the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC). He and his team manage all substantive change reviews including new academic programs, off-campus instructional sites, mergers and consolidations, program closures, joint and dual academic programs, competency-based educational programs, and others. Kevin joined SACSCOC in 2014 from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign where he was founding director of the Illinois Professional Science Master's. He was professor of management and entrepreneurship at Kennesaw State University where he also served as associate dean for graduate business programs and managed the institution’s AACSB International accreditation. Kevin holds a Ph.D. in industrial management from Clemson University.