Faculty Senate Study Committee C - OP for Search Committees
This study committee is charged with coming up with a policy for assuring Faculty Representation on Search Committees. Study Committee C has been researching what is in the rules and OPs currently and so far they have found nothing on Faculty Representation on Search Committees for president and other positions. Second they have been discussing which positions they want to recommend have faculty representation on their search committees. So far they have identified president, provost, academic deans also possibly VPR. The third thing they have been discussing the definition of a faculty member. So far they have been discussing following what the Tenure Advisory Committee did which is having someone who has not served in an administrative position of chair of a department or above in the last five years. Next they will look at peer institutions. If anyone has any suggestions of what a peer institution has done they would be glad to hear the suggestion. Once they know what peer institutions are doing they will come up with language and policy they want to propose.

Held: Has there been a discussion about who these faculty will be in terms of hand-picked by administrators or faculty senators who are actually elected?

Barenberg: Our discussions about this have been very preliminary. There was a suggestion actually by John Howe that we might be some elected by the Senate and some chosen by the administration in order to foster a spirit of collaboration. Certainly we want to ensure that some of those faculty are coming from the Senate and elected by the Senate.

Held: The other recommendation that I would have would be to insist upon some kind of presentation to the faculty as a whole of at least the finalists if not the semi-finalists. Because I think we need to see who these people are in that kind of setting. And not just have decisions made behind closed doors regardless of who’s on the search committee.

Howe: Just a query to the people who are serving as liaisons or just know what’s going on around campus, one difficulty this committee has is it’s really looking at one piece of a broader problem which involves staff and student representation on some of these committees. So if someone isn’t aware of any attempts to codify student input which has been customary in the presidential searches or the staff input on particular positions probably contacting Professor Barenberg on that would be useful. The committee seems to be undecided as to whether we want to craft our own little piece saying ‘well this is how faculty should be represented’ or whether we might want to be looking at more broad OP that would handle these other parallel constituencies that might also have a claim to have some input.

Drager: Has the Staff Senate taken up anything like this?
Self: The President of the Staff Senate has been included in some of the preliminary vitae review for the Presidential search. Not aware of any other activities with other searches for the staff.

Nathan: The Staff Senate President, Jeff Hayes, I believe he is on the Advisory Committee for the Presidential search. The Student Government Association President is on the Search Committee as an ongoing member. So there is some representation. You said you want to confine the charge a little bit, so you are talking about President, Vice President, VPR and Dean’s searches. Are there other searches or appointments that go on on campus that may lack faculty input that might have bearing on curricular matters and teaching matters? Has that been discussed at all?

Barenberg: It hasn’t really been discussed. The discussion was that we thought it would be best to confine to matters where faculty input was particularly important. Whether it was someone being appointed to Student Affairs, some things don’t seem to as obviously warrant faculty input.

VI. New Business: Faculty Senate President Nathan distributed via email the letter he wrote on August 2nd to the Board of Regents August 10th meeting regarding the Presidential Search.

There was some discussion on the $10000 Degree and what various institutions in Texas are doing as well as how this would affect Texas Tech.

There was also some discussion about a Faculty Ombudsman. There is currently an Ombudsman for staff but not faculty.
