The Center for Undergraduate Research, recently established under the Office of the Provost, seeks to collaborate with students, faculty, and campus partners to engage the university community in undergraduate research initiatives. The Center provides support for faculty and students by developing innovative programs and activities to enhance undergraduate research at Texas Tech University and beyond.

In alignment with the university mission, the Center is committed to the advancement of knowledge, fostering intellectual and personal development, and stimulating meaningful research and service for both faculty and students.

Throughout the semester, the Center provides direction and support for undergraduate students interested in conducting research with a faculty mentor. The Center hosts educational workshops for students targeted at organizing, conducting, and presenting research, preparing for graduate school, and graduate admission testing preparation. Resources are also available for faculty, staff, and organizations engaged in undergraduate research. To learn more about the Center, please visit undergraduateresearch.ttu.edu.

We welcome you to stop by the Center in room 341 of the Administration Building to discuss undergraduate research here on campus!

NEWS

What is Undergraduate Research?

As defined by the Council on Undergraduate Research:

- An inquiry or investigation conducted by an undergraduate student that makes an original intellectual or creative contribution to the discipline.

Why should you get involved?

- Opportunity to work with a faculty mentor
- Apply concepts from your courses to "real life" situations
- Further your creative achievement and more!
