

Hello, Red Raiders.

Life seems a little complicated right now. We want you to know your academic advising staff at University Advising is still here to talk with you, facilitate your preparation for registration, assist you with your transition to a more online learning environment, and help keep your academic life as normal as possible.

Each advisor in University Advising – your PPHC advisor, your eXplore advisor, your Academic Recovery advisor, or your TTAP advisor – is available to meet with you. We have several ways we can and will connect with you.

- Email your advisor directly. We'll schedule a virtual advising appointment with you.
- Call us. We'll connect you to your advisor.
- Schedule an appointment at Strive.ttu.edu
- Go directly to our Blackboard advising page – your advisor has emailed you directions about how to access that page.

While most of the advisors are working from home, we are working. We have the time – in fact, we have the need – to talk with you. Stay engaged with us.

Check your TTU email – daily. It is the official means of email communication from our offices.

Stay in touch with us. While it may seem that life is standing still, the semester will continue. Registration for fall will open in April. Summer classes will happen. Your academic career is continuing. Know that we are here with you.

Take care,

Cathe Nutter

Catherine Nutter, Ph.D.
Senior Director, University Advising
catherine.nutter@ttu.edu