Kristina Yu, AIA

MCCLAIN + YU ARCHITECTURE AND DESIGN

Kristina Yu is an architect and principal at McClain+Yu Architecture & Design, located in Albuquerque, New Mexico. She served as a faculty member at the Texas Tech Huckabee College of Architecture and is currently a professor and administrator at the University of New Mexico. Kristina is particularly interested in the relationship between planning and educational facility environments. She is experienced in utilizing technology to meet the needs of today's digitally savvy students, which is reflected in the designs developed by her firm. Her ultimate goal is to create meaningful buildings that positively impact people's lives. She works with a team of talented and careful individuals who share her vision, and together, they strive to create better environments. Kristina firmly believes that the building process is an opportunity to build community, and through her work, she aims to create spaces that bring people together and foster a sense of belonging.

Todd Wascher, AIA

LAKE|FLATO

Todd Wascher is Partner and a leader in Lake|Flato's Urban Environments studio. Todd has over two decades of experience with commercial development and master planning projects. Much of his work focuses on the inherently sustainable act of adapting existing sites and structures into vibrant, human-scaled destinations that remove barriers to community-building and provide spaces where people want to be. Todd's notable projects include the Pearl Brewery Development, The Witte Museum master plan, and the mass timber Soto Building, all in San Antonio. Outside of Texas, he is currently working on a master plan development for Montgomery Park in Portland, OR, the Trappay Riverfront District in Lafayette, LA, and two mass timber projects in Oregon and Idaho.

Jessica Deaver, AIA

NICK DEAVER JES DEAVER ARCHITECTURE

Jes Deaver, AIA is an award-winning residential architect raised in New England and Texas with an interest in the environment and people's place in it. Her interest in the future, land stewardship, helping people tell personal stories and frequent contributions to Texas Architect magazine have made her a recognized voice in the field of architecture. She was the 2020 AIA Austin Women in Architecture Committee Chair and served on the Texas Society of Architects Public Outreach Task Force. In 2022 Jes shared her work and theory on resilience as guest lecturer for the Texas Tech University College of Architecture's Fall Lecture series along with her father and Partner Nick Deaver, AIA. National profiles about their design vision were published in 2023 in Residential Design magazine and Western Art and Architecture magazine.
