

PLATO AS WORLD LITERATURE

PAUL ALLEN MILLER

Carolina Distinguished Professor of Classics and Comparative Literature, University of South Carolina

5pm, MONDAY 11th November, 2019

CMLL Building, Qualia Room (Basement 09)

In this talk, Miller argues that the world we live in today is in its essence Platonic, i.e, the world as it is pictured by Platonism. It contends that a Platonic world view generally undergirds our assumptions about what it means to do science, what it means to have an evidence-based attitude toward the world, and what we understand to constitute the truth: a correspondence between my perception of objects in the world and the categories we use to define them.

Sponsored by: The TTU Humanities Centre; Department of English; Department of Classical & Modern Languages & Literatures; and the Classics Excellence Fund