The Texas Medieval Association

Texas Medieval Association (TEMA):

28th Annual Meeting, TTU October 25-27

Thursday events will include an afternoon public symposium related to "Pre-Modern Bibles: from the Dead Sea Scrolls to Complutensian Polyglot Bible, an exhibit of original manuscripts and facsimiles displayed at the Museum of Texas Tech University. Frans and Katherine Van Liere, from Calvin College, will speak on the medieval study of the Bible and on the Spanish Renaissance context of the Complutensian Polyglot Bible. The Bible symposium will be followed by a reception and then by a concert of Spanish Renaissance Music from Texas Tech's Collegium Musicum.

Friday events, centered at the Museum of Texas Tech University, will include multiple interdisciplinary sessions on things medieval and renaissance, and a plenary address by Professor Timothy Graham, director of the University of New Mexico Institute for Medieval Studies and winner of the Medieval Academy's 2016 excellence in teaching award.

Saturday's events will be held in the TTU central campus. There will be more research presentations and panels, a plenary address by George Greenia, Emeritus professor of Spanish at William and Mary, on "The Camino de Santiago and Medieval Pilgrim Libraries," and a TEMA Business luncheon and presidential address. The day will end with an off-campus closing reception.

Proposals are requested for conference sessions and for individual papers. Sessions related to Spanish medieval and renaissance themes are encouraged, as are those on all aspects of medieval and renaissance studies. Please email proposals to texasmedieval@gmail.com or to john.howe@ttu.edu, prior to September 15, 2018. For more information: see www.texasmedieval.org.
