TITLE IX REPORTER

WHO IS A MANDATORY REPORTER?

Any individual employed by Texas Tech University, including all faculty, staff, and student employees are mandatory reporters.

WHEN TO FILE A REPORT

You MUST file a report to Title IX if you witness or receive information in the course and scope of your employment about a student or employee involved in the following:

- Sexual Harassment
- Sexual Assault
- Domestic/Dating Violence
- Pregnancy
- Sexual Exploitation
- Discrimination
- Stalking
- Parenting

TITLE IX REPORTER

EXAMPLES

The following examples could be situations you encounter that meet the requirements for mandatory reporting.

- A student tells you in “confidence” that they were sexually assaulted over Christmas break.
- A student complains that members of their cohort often make negative statements toward women and people of color.
- You hear a rumor that an administrator regularly makes disparaging comments about employees and students who receive disability accommodations.
- A student is concerned because a faculty member will not allow them to make up an exam they missed for the birth of her child.
- You notice a bruise on a student's arm, and they inform you that their partner hit them
- A faculty member tells you that a former student is stalking them on social media.
- A student tells you they missed class due to their partner not allowing them to leave their apartment.
- A student comes to you and informs you that they have recently become pregnant.
- A graduate student informs you that their young child is ill and will need academic accommodations while caring for their child

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Should I still fill out a report if I witness an incident even if I am unable to obtain the student's name or information?

- Yes, because the information you provide could be supplemental to information we have already received.
- If someone directly reports to you, you need to ask for their name so we can reach them.

What if a student or employee discloses an incident to me while off duty?

- You are only required by law to report incidents that you witness or are made aware of in your scope of work: while on duty or a student or employee report to you specifically because you are a university employee
- This can be a tough line to navigate. Call the Title IX office if clarification is needed. We can always be contacted directly for immediate resources

After I submitted an initial report, I find out more information about the incident.

What should I do?

- If you believe the information provides new and relevant details about the incident, please email or call the Title IX office at 806.834.1949 instead of filling out an additional report

ENCOUNTERING STUDENTS IN DISTRESS

ENCOUTNER

Faculty teaching in the classroom often have the first opportunity to observe if a student is in some kind of personal distress or crisis. As such, you may be in the position to be the first to extend a "helping hand" to a troubled student. These suggestions are intended to guide you in extending that helping hand.

As an instructor, you may become aware of students' anxiety, depression, loneliness, marital and family adjustment situations, sexual concerns, feelings of low self-worth, career dilemma or other situations that are causing the student to be personally distressed or in a troubled mental state.

While this distress results from the student's personal situation, the effects of a troubled personal life sometimes become evident in the classroom. It may affect the student's ability to succeed in the classroom as well as impact other student's around them.

The Student Counseling Center (SCC) on campus is always an available resource to students. You may refer a student to the SCC if necessary.

ENCOUNTERING STUDENTS IN DISTRESS

CONSULT

The Student Counseling Center (SCC) has counselors available on campus to consult with to determine how you can help a student in need. As a consultant, the SCC is here to help you determine the best course of action for addressing your concern.

We accomplish this by discussing with you your concerns and brainstorming ways in which you can help. You are not required to reach out to seemingly troubled students, this is your choice. If the troubled student's behavior is impacting their ability or other student's ability to learn, you may want to consider visiting with your academic dean for classroom management.

Here are a few reasons why faculty and staff consult with the SCC staff:

- Get ideas for how to suggest to someone that they should seek counseling or assistance
- Become aware of services and resources available to help with concerns
- Learn how to refer a student to the SCC
- Request that we meet with students who are dealing with a difficult situation
- Get ideas about how to prevent a negative situation from starting or escalating

APPROACHING TO HELP

When you first approach a student to help, follow these tips:

1. Try to talk to the student in a private location
2. Mention that you are concerned and cite a specific reason for the concern
3. Give the student time to talk about their situation
4. Actively listen
5. Use a calm voice with the student Ask if the student would like to talk with a Student Counseling Center (SCC) counselor who has expertise in assisting students
6. Mention that counseling is without fee and is confidential (Unless a student indicates intention to harm themselves or others)
7. If a student would like to talk with a counselor, offer to walk the student to the SCC for walk-in hours (12:30pm - 3:30pm)

When you have an interaction with a distressed or troubled student, report this to your Associate Dean and complete the Student of Concern form through the Office of the Dean of Students website.
