

RACE, RACISM & PUBLIC SPACES

As creator and organizer of "Race, Racism & Public Spaces," thank you for being invested in and helping to acknowledge and diminish discriminatory incidents in our society and within our communities. Given America's current racially-charged climate, the purpose of this series is to discuss race and racism, address issues of racism and discrimination in public spaces, and generate action steps that students, faculty, staff, and administrators can take to curtail racist and discriminatory incidents. Racism—whether conscious or unconscious—is a systemic issue. Racist incidents occur in society's public spaces, including its university. Thank you for being willing to have uncomfortable yet necessary discussions to help move our university and nation forward.

I am indebted to my sponsors and collaborators for helping to ensure the success of #RRPSTexasTech. Thank you, Beacon Press™, Barnes & Noble at Texas Tech™, Texas Tech University Office of the Vice President, Division of Diversity, Equity & Inclusion, LEAD Fellows, College of Education, Teaching, Learning & Professional Development Center, Institute for Inclusive Excellence, Doctoral Support Center for Writing & Research Excellence, Texas Tech University School of Law, Women's Gender Studies, Department of Philosophy, and Minorities and Philosophy for your contributions and support. I am especially grateful for the hard work and support of the following individuals: Associate Dean Mellinee Lesley (Education), Acting Dean Robin Lock (Education), Dr. Mary Ann Bodine- Al Sharif (Education), Ms. Lauren Adams (Education), Mrs. Lauren Brownell (Education), Mr. Neil Knauth (Education), and Ms. Jennifer Canela (Beacon Press™). This initiative would have been much harder without support from all of you. Thank you for everything.

Sincerely,

Jasmine D. Parker, Ph.D.

Jasmine D. Parker, Ph.D.

Creator and Organizer

Twitter: @IAMDrParker

E-mail: jasmine.parker@ttu.edu