

Green Apple Pod

- What is Green Apple Pod? A documentary-style education policy podcast, with each season diving deep into a problem in education policy, and how we can fix it. Season I is all about teacher attrition.
- Inspired by experience as an educator and researcher with access to evidence and anecdotal experience, but no platform to share grievances and solutions together in one space
- Partnered alongside a colleague with experience in producing videos and podcasts, as well as peers in my network from other organizations, to finalize a "template" for each episode and a narrative for the story
- Conducted dozens of interviews with a diverse cast of teachers, academic researchers, and school leaders to identify pain points and potential solutions
- Constantly sought feedback from listeners, mentors, and stakeholders to try and present an objective and engaging project that educates stakeholders on the importance of retaining good teachers, and how we lose them

★★★★★ A former educator

Love that this series is shedding light on the U.S. teacher attrition crisis in such a well-balanced and digestible way. Each episode presents a slightly different take on the myriad challenges that school communities face. A great listen for folks in the trenches of k-12 public education or those interested in improving school conditions for all stakeholders.

This is a great listen for those who really want to understand what's going on in teacher attrition. Listening to the stats and stories will break your heart, but it also points in the direction of how to tackle this issue! Well done!

I can only listen to this podcast through the lens of a teacher who left the classroom in the summer of 2021. Listening to the combination of academics and research as well as real teacher stories, validated the many feelings I have had leading up to leaving the classroom and now that I have left. So far episode one has done a fantastic job of highlighting some of the many issues that teachers are facing currently. I can't wait for the next episode!

As a teacher, there are so many areas we struggle with that the public may never know about. Thank you for giving those things not only a voice and a platform but a deep dive into the reasons why they are happening. This is an amazing podcast, I can't wait to hear the future episodes!
