Why Come to Texas Tech?

Interdisciplinary Programs: Learn innovative methodologies and produce cutting-edge research. Working closely with faculty, students can tailor their degree to fit their interests and professional objectives. With departmental LetterPress, Digital Humanities, and Media Labs, and excellent Special Collections in the library, students have access to many resources to aid in producing original research and writing. Students also have the opportunity to take classes in different departments and programs to study a secondary area of concentration, and pursue a graduate certificate.

Graduate Support: Nearly 100% of our full-time students receive financial support as teaching assistants, editorial assistants, technology assistants, and assistant program coordinators.

Award-Winning Faculty: Our faculty members are highly respected for their research, writing, and commitment to pedagogical excellence. They have won awards and fellowships from the Fulbright Foundation, the Bibliographical Society of America, the Huntington Library, American Council of Learned Societies, the National Endowment for the Arts, and others.

Professional Development: Our Professional Development Curriculum provides information about job hunting, scholarly publication, professional organizations, and career management strategies.

Placement Record: Recent M.A. graduates have gone on to top doctoral programs across the country, and our Ph.D. recipients have competed successfully for tenure-track positions in a competitive market.

Minors, Concentrations, Graduate Certificates: The English department offers certificates in Linguistics, Publishing & Editing, Book History & Digital Humanities, and Teaching Technical Communication.

For more information, visit http://www.depts.ttu.edu/english/ or email english.gradadvisor@ttu.edu

APPLICATION DEADLINE: MONDAY, DEC. 15, 2014