RESILIENCE & RETENTION CONFERENCE

Louise Hancox

Senior Director of Career Innovation,
Director of the Futures Hub

University of Arkansas - Fayetteville

As senior director of career innovation for the Honors College, Louise Hancox helps students create their “first professional self” by finding opportunities to expand their resumes outside of the classroom.

Her position calls for collaboration throughout campus: she draws upon resources from the Career Center, the Office of Entrepreneurship and Innovation, as well as those in the individual colleges to ensure that honors scholars are prepared for and can communicate their value in the twenty-first century workplace.

Hancox was born in England and grew up in Canada. She obtained her Bachelor of Arts at Queen’s University in Kingston, Ontario, and her MBA at York University in Toronto. She completed her Ph.D. in American history and visual culture at the University of Arkansas, where her dissertation revolved around an iconic painting, The Arkansas Traveler.
