Course dates: May 12th – May 29th in Seville, Spain

Notes: Permission from instructor is required. To apply, use https://forms.gle/rYDmbUjxKVVxrm6Q6. For more information, email Dr. Joe Aranha at Joseph.Aranha@ttu.edu. Prior experience in architecture is not required. Students of all majors and interests are welcome.

What can one learn about lifestyle, beliefs, values, traditions and other aspects of a society by experiencing a city and its architecture? How do factors such as culture, history, climate, socio-political systems, artistic trends, materials, technology and other factors shape buildings and cities and give identity and character to places? How can a thoughtful immersive experience in an unfamiliar place encourage one to think critically about issues and conditions of the built environment that may be taken for granted or which may not currently play a significant role in one’s own culture? The city of Seville in southern Spain will be the primary classroom for this immersive educational experience. Students will examine these questions by engaging with the city, its neighborhoods, streets, public spaces and buildings in a variety of ways.

Lectures and readings together with excursions and structured observation assignments involving experiences of street life, buildings and neighborhoods will provide opportunities for students to learn from and think critically about culture, society and the built environment. Students will keep a journal, participate in discussions and make presentations. Some basic instruction in photography will also be included. They will draw upon their experience of Seville to write a publishable essay on a chosen topic related to the built environment and any combination of factors that have shaped, or which currently influence it. Students in this course do not need to have any prior background in architecture, but a willingness to explore and learn from that which is different, will certainly help.

The course is offered by TTU Architecture professor Joe Aranha. Prof. Aranha has led study abroad to Spain, Mexico and India on numerous occasions. He has lived, travelled and taught in parts of the world as diverse as Malaysia, Zimbabwe, Ethiopia, Indonesia and India as a Fulbright scholar and as a university professor.

Africa is the continent least understood by Americans; it is often presented by the media as a land of war, famine, and pestilence. This course will present Africa’s contemporary reality—the positive as well as the negative—by examining major current issues after briefly surveying Africa’s history, geography, societies, and culture. Themes covered will include political dynamics, regional conflicts, human rights and women’s issues, economic development and poverty (including the role played by internal assistance), involvement of external forces and globalization, refugees and migration, and environmental and public health crisis (including HIV/AIDS). The course will also examine Africa’s role in current U.S. global policy priorities, including U.S. security concerns. The required texts are: Understanding Contemporary Africa (edited by April and Donald Gordon), Things Fall Apart (Chinua Achebe), and supplemental articles designated by the instructor and available in a compendium. This course has writing intensive requirements.

This course will introduce students to three of the United States most important international political arenas. Those three places will be the Middle East, India and China. As the United States looks out into an emerging 21st century, these three areas are becoming increasingly important. This course will examine the cultures, histories and politics of these three locals as well as gain an understanding of their long standing and current political regimes. The students should leave this course with a basic understanding of those regions and will then be able to critically understand the importance of those regions to the United States.

THIS COURSE FULFILLS 3 HOURS OF THE HONORS SEMINAR REQUIREMENT.
This course is intended to familiarize students about current global priorities by engaging directly with some of America’s leading foreign policy experts in Washington DC through a partnership with the American Academy of Diplomacy. The “Academy” is the premier foreign policy association in the US whose members are former career and non-career U.S. government officials who have served with distinction in international affairs.

The two-week Washington DC course segment will consist of two parts. During week one Academy members will lead discussions by examining global regions (e.g. East Asia, Africa, Western hemisphere, etc.) and cross-cutting themes (international security, health and the environment, human rights and refugees, etc.) During Week 2 students will visit select think tanks and policy groups to hear directly from their experts on issues the institution is currently prioritizing. Students will also meet with congressional staff who follow global issues on the House Foreign Affairs and Senate Foreign Relations committees. In addition to a course grade and credit, students will also earn a certificate from the AAD.

In 2015 The remaining four living members of the Grateful Dead came together for their Fare Thee Well Concerts 50th anniversary concerts. Tickets for the five concerts sold out immediately and as much as $100,000 was being asked for them on the scalper’s market. What it is about this band with roots in bluegrass, American folk, and basic rock n’ roll that created a whole subculture known as Deadheads. The Grateful Dead 1965-1995 became one of the biggest selling attractions in the history of American Popular Culture. Yet the band only had one top ten hit and rarely had singles or albums on the charts. Their concerts could be four hours long. One song could last 30 plus minutes where they would just jam. Yet their music is now a part of American songbook, and some argue they were one of the greatest American bands. Critics, however, are divided as the Grateful Dead are both the most loved and one of the most hated bands in history. With roots in the literature in the Beat Generation, the Grateful Dead fostered a unique community that continues to this day. This course looks at the band’s roots in the Beat Generation and the Counterculture/Civil Rights Movement. Through the lens of American history and culture, this course examines the impact of the Grateful Dead, the Beat Generation, and the Counterculture/Civil Rights Movement. However, this course will not focus solely on The Grateful Dead, but also look at the music of the 1960s and its attempts for social change in addition to music coming out of San Francisco at the time. We will also look at selected key moments within the 1960s Counterculture/Civil Rights movement and its effect on the American cultural landscape. This course is reading intensive and contains mature content.

This course was specifically designed for the students on the Honors Study abroad trip to Seville, Spain in July 2019. It will attempt to explain the culture, history, art, and architecture of the things the student will be seeing in Seville. The course will explain the rise of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam and discuss how the Muslims take control of what is today Spain and Portugal in the year 711 and how they held it until the Christians took it back in 1492 and 1498. The course will chart how Spain became a great center of learning during this time and how that learning was spread all over Europe and the world. We will begin to see how far-reaching that culture would become. As the class travels through Spain, visiting cities such as Grenada, Cordoba, Toledo, and Madrid, the students will be exposed to national heritage sites such as the Alhambra and the Mezquita with a full appreciation of who created these things, the purposes they served, and the contributions these cities and structures have made to human progress. This course will transform the study abroad experience from a normative classroom experience to a living, breathing classroom where the students will actually experience things they will never forget while steeped in the culture, art, and history which provided that experience.

When Ali G asked Donald Trump “What is the most popular thing in the world?” his one-word answer was, “Music.” Trump was correct in thinking that music is, and always has been, pervasive in human culture. Moreover, there are few individuals who lack a strong connection to something musical, be it a favorite band, a meaningful song, or a melody that we hope to never hear again. This course will introduce students to the social, physiological, and psychological reasons behind these connections, shuttling back and forth between the universal and personal manifestations of music and our minds.

Wine has been many things to many peoples over the course of recorded human history. It has been a cure, a curse, and a cause for civil war. It is prized by kings and produced by peasants. Throughout various periods in history, it has been prescribed for almost every ailment, has played a role in wars and conflicts, has made fortunes and saved lives. It’s been outlawed and forbidden, but also directly referenced in religious texts. It’s a complex drink for complex people, and it’s also one of our state’s fastest-growing industries.

This course will examine many of the significant impacts wine has had on medicine, technology, art, religion, and culture. Students will gain an enriched historical perspective by engaging in discussion on these topics, and will also take away a better acquaintance with the world’s major wine regions and how the importance of wine in those regions provides a lens through which to view the culture and the history of the place, as well as its terroir. Students in this course will learn the correct technical wine tasting method and will be expected to connect knowledge gained in course material to applied understanding of the wines tasted in class.

Graphic Narratives (also known as graphic novels) have become entrenched in our modern-day culture. These narratives are a storytelling device that goes back over a hundred years (with proto-graphic narratives going back thousands of years), but only recently has the critical acclaim for the format been recognized. Graphic narratives usually combine art and text to convey ideas and stories to actively capture readers’ attention since both sides of the brain are engaged when viewing this medium of literature. Graphic narratives can convey both non-fiction and fictional storylines and delve deep in a wide variety of genres and topics including captivity stories, social critique, melodrama, the superhero and even thoughtful discussions of race and gender issues. This course will look at the graphic narrative as a serious art and literary form from its historical beginnings to the present day. We will critically analyze selected narratives. This course is reading-intensive and contains mature content.
