

Ziv Bohrer

Dr. Ziv Bohrer is a senior lecturer at the Bar-Ilan University Faculty of Law and a senior research fellow at the Begin-Sadat Centre for Strategic Studies. His main research area is Public International Law, with an emphasis on both current and historical issues relating to International Humanitarian Law (The Law of War) and International Criminal Law.

Ziv is a member of the Academic Advisory Board of the Journal of the History of International Law.

In 2020-2021 – Dr. Bohrer was elected, based on scholarly excellence, to be a member of the that academic year’s Humanities and Social Sciences Young Scholar Forum of The Israel Academy of Sciences (the forum’s topic was: “Racism, Anti-Semitism, Genocide: The Holocaust in its Historical, Ideological and Cultural Contexts”).

Dr. Bohrer has published in various academic journals, including: The European Journal of International Law; Law & History Review; and Michigan Journal of International Law. During 2020, Ziv published two books. One co-authored with Janina Dill (Oxford University) and Helen Duffy (Leiden University): Law Applicable to Armed Conflict – Part II of Max Planck Trialogues on the Law of War and Peace (Cambridge University Press, Anne Peters & Christian Marxsen eds., 2020). The other: Ziv Bohrer, The Superior Order Defense and Manifestly Unlawful Orders in Israeli Law (Isr. M.o.D. Press, I. Fine ed., intro. by M. Kremnitzer, 2020) [in Hebrew].

Ziv was awarded various scholarships, grants and honors, including: a Max Planck Institute Grant (2020), a DAAD Scholarship (2019), a Bar-Ilan Rector Grant (as part of a group) for Interdisciplinary Research Groups (2018), an Israel’s Junior Law Faculty Workshop Paper Competition Prize (2017), a Fulbright Postdoctoral Fellowship (2011), a Wolf Foundation Doctorate Student Scholarship for Excellence (2010), and a Meitar Fellowship (2009) [valedictorian].

Dr. Bohrer had been a Visiting Scholar at the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law in Heidelberg, Germany; the Cambridge University Law Faculty, and Michigan University Law School. He also was a Research Fellow at the Hebrew University - Sacher Institute for Legislative Research and Comparative Law, and a Visiting Lecturer at University of Georgia (UGA) Law School.

Prior to entering academia, Ziv served in the Israeli Defense Force (IDF) Military Advocate General Corps (2002-2006), first as a Legal Officer for Instruction and Research at the IDF School of Military Law and later as Legal Advisor of the Center for the Employment of IDF Civilian Workers. In 2005, he was awarded a Military Advocate General Certificate of Excellence.
