

Gary Corn

Professor Gary Corn is the director of the Technology, Law & Security Program and serves as an adjunct professor specializing in cyber and national security law, as well as the law of armed conflict. A recognized expert at the intersection of cyber and national security law and policy, Professor Corn joined TLS after a distinguished twenty-six-year career in the U.S. Army, where he practiced national security law at the highest levels within the Department of Defense. In his final five years, he served as the Staff Judge Advocate (General Counsel) to U.S. Cyber Command.

Throughout his military career, Professor Corn held various positions at the brigade, division, and corps levels. He worked multiple times as a military prosecutor, civil litigator, and operational law attorney. His assignments included serving as Deputy Legal Counsel to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Operational Law Branch Chief in the Office of the Judge Advocate General of the Army, and the Staff Judge Advocate to U.S. Army South.

Professor Corn earned a Juris Doctor (JD) from George Washington University, a Bachelor of Arts (BA) in International Relations from Bucknell University, a Master of Laws (LLM) from the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General's Legal Center and School, and a Master of Arts (MA) in National Security Studies from the United States Army War College. He is also a graduate of the Escola de Comando e Estado Maior do Exército do Brasil (Command and General Staff College of the Brazilian Army).
