

EXONERATED BUT STILL CONFINED: SLAYER RULES PRESENT EXTRA OBSTACLES TO CRIMINALLY
EXONERATED INDIVIDUALS

BY PAIGE FOSTER

*Please Note: This article was selected for publication in the Estate Planning & Community Property Law Journal Volume X, Book 2. It has not been through EPJ's editing process.

EXONERATED BUT STILL CONFINED: SLAYER RULES PRESENT EXTRA OBSTACLES TO CRIMINALLY
EXONERATED INDIVIDUALS

- I. INTRODUCTION 1
- II. INNOCENCE PROJECT 2
 - A. Property Rights of the Convicted and Incarcerated 3
 - B. Wrongfully Convicted Lose Freedom and Inheritance 4
- III. BACKGROUND OF SLAYER STATUTES 4
 - A. Common Law 8
 - B. Each State Takes a Different Approach 8
 - i. Forfeiture of Estate 8
 - ii. Staying the Proceeding 10
 - iii. No Forfeiture: Court Imposes Constructive Trust 11
- IV. OVERLAP OF TWO SYSTEMS 13
 - A. Compensating Exonerees 14
 - B. Facing the Harshness of Slayer Statutes 14
- V. SOLUTIONS 14
 - A. Sue the Family 15
 - B. More Robust Compensation Statutes 15
 - C. The Government Foots (Part of) the Bill 17
 - D. An Exoneree Sues the Government in Tort In Lieu of Family Suit 18
 - E. Nobody Receives the Money Until Appeals are Exhausted 19
- VI. CONCLUSION 20

EXONERATED BUT STILL CONFINED: SLAYER RULES PRESENT EXTRA OBSTACLES TO CRIMINALLY
EXONERATED INDIVIDUALS

I. INTRODUCTION

In the early morning of June 5, 2005, Noura Jackson frantically called 911 to report that her mother, Jennifer, had been brutally murdered in her Memphis home.¹ Four years later, Noura was convicted of second-degree murder in her mother's death.² In the interim of her mother's murder and her conviction, Noura's aunts and uncles sued her under Tennessee's "slayer statute" to prevent Noura from receiving her mother's $1.5 million estate.³ Noura was Jennifer's only child and Noura's father died years earlier, so Noura was entitled to the estate.⁴ Under Tennessee law, an interested party must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the "individual...feloniously and intentionally kills the decedent."⁵ A preponderance of the evidence standard requires the finder of fact to determine it is more likely than not that a fact is true.⁶

During her murder trial, Noura's relatives successfully sued her for her mother's estate.⁷ Tennessee law does not require a conviction, but it helps the relatives' case because it conclusively determines that she in fact killed the decedent.⁸ Noura was later convicted for second-degree murder.⁹

In August of 2014, after spending nine years in prison, the Tennessee Supreme Court reversed Noura's conviction.¹⁰ Evidence of prosecutorial misconduct prompted a re-examination of her case.¹¹ Noura was exonerated of her mother's murder.¹² After release from prison, Noura sued her family to recover some of the estate she lost during her murder trial.¹³ The parties settled in August 2017 for an undisclosed amount.¹⁴

¹ Emily Bazelon, She was Convicted of Killing her Mother. Prosecutors Withheld the Evidence That Would Have Freed Her, N.Y. TIMES (Aug. 1, 2017), <https://www.nytimes.com/2017/08/01/magazine/she-was-convicted-of-killing-her-mother-prosecutors-withheld-the-evidence-that-would-have-freed-her.html>.

² See id.

³ See id.; TENN. CODE ANN. § 31-1-106 (West 2017).

⁴ Bazelon supra, note 1.

⁵ Bazelon supra, note 1.

⁶ Kevin F. O'Malley, Jay E. Grenig & William C. Lee, Preponderance of the Evidence, 3B FED. JURY PRAC. & INSTR. § 163:41.

⁷ Bazelon supra, note 1.

⁸ TENN. CODE ANN. § 31-1-106.

⁹ See Bazelon supra, note 1.

¹⁰ See Bazelon supra, note 1.

¹¹ Janice Broach, Noura Jackson Opens Trial to Receive Mother's Estate, WMCACTIONNEWS5 (Sept. 8, 2016, 10:39 PM) <http://www.wmcactionnews5.com/story/33052887/noura-jackson-opens-trial-to-receive-mothers-estate>.

¹² See id.

¹³ Glenn Ruppel & Alexa Valiente, How a Woman Won Her Release from Prison Years After Being Convicted of Her Mother's Murder, ABC NEWS (Mar. 23, 2017, 3:12 PM), <http://abcnews.go.com/US/woman-won-release-prison-years-convicted-mothers-murder/story?id=46313117>.

¹⁴ See id.

This comment will address the hypothetical legal consequences exonerees face after release from prison but lost their inheritances through civil suits.¹⁵ Often, the exonerees must sue the same families they want to re-connect with after prison.¹⁶ Many state compensation statutes for exonerees contain gaps and shortcomings and vary vastly from state to state.¹⁷ The first section of this comment will address the goals of the Innocence Project and the relief it provides for the wrongfully convicted.¹⁸ This section will specifically address exonerations for murder and what generally happens to property after incarceration.¹⁹ Next, an analysis of slayer statutes and requisite case law will demonstrate how each state addresses people who murder for inheritance.²⁰ The wording of the statutes reflect a particular policy standpoint either in favor or against forfeiture of property.²¹ Each state approaches the treatment of slayers differently, including outright forfeiture, staying the proceeding, or prohibition of forfeiture altogether.²² Some states provide for a constructive trust remedy rather than a slayer statute.²³ Next, this comment will address the overlap of criminal exonerations and slayer statutes and the inevitable gaps that form when someone falls into both categories.²⁴ Finally, five solutions provide alternative options for exoneree-beneficiaries.²⁵

II. INNOCENCE PROJECT

The Innocence Project facilitates the exoneration of wrongfully convicted individuals through transparent and objective analysis of DNA evidence, witness reliability measures, and other methods to correct errors that resulted in erroneous convictions.²⁶ The National Registry of Exonerations outlines the variety of crimes individuals were exonerated of and the types of evidence used to overturn their convictions.²⁷ Contrary to popular belief, the Innocence Project handles more than murder cases, such as rape, child abuse, and other crimes.²⁸ Often, official ¹⁵ See generally Emily Bazelon, She was Convicted of Killing her Mother. Prosecutors Withheld the Evidence That Would Have Freed Her, N.Y. TIMES (Aug. 1, 2017) (exonerated woman sued her family for her lost inheritance).

¹⁶ See id.

¹⁷ Evan J. Mandery, et al., Compensation Statutes and Post-Exoneration Offending, 103 J. CRIM. L. & CRIMINOLOGY 553, 554 (2013), <http://scholarlycommons.law.northwestern.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=7450&context=jclc>.

¹⁸ See infra Part II.

¹⁹ See infra Part II.

²⁰ See infra Part III.

²¹ See infra Part III.

²² See infra Part III.

²³ See infra Part III.

²⁴ See infra Part IV.

²⁵ See infra Part V.

²⁶ See Our Mission, THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, <https://www.law.umich.edu/special/exoneration/Pages/about.aspx> (last visited Sept. 15, 2017).

²⁷ See THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, <https://www.law.umich.edu/special/exoneration/Pages/about.aspx> (last visited Sept. 15, 2017).

²⁸ See id.

misconduct and mistaken identification place these types of cases in front of state Supreme Courts for review.²⁹

A. Property Rights of the Convicted and Incarcerated

Whether the person is convicted of a misdemeanor or capital murder, convicted individuals keep title to their property.³⁰ Although he or she keeps title to the property, the prisoner relinquishes possession behind bars.³¹ Often, defendants released on bail have time to sort out their property matters.³² However, without financial resources or valuable assets, a person may never be able to resolve the disposition of his or her property and the burden falls on the family.³³ Apart from federal drug convictions, the government may not take one's property without just compensation.³⁴ Civil forfeiture is a much-debated topic but society generally warns against such overreaching government actions.³⁵

However, some states created slayer statutes that allow forfeiture of inheritance gained through murdering a testator.³⁶ The Uniform Probate Code, adopted in sixteen states, outlines the types of killings that will result in forfeiture.³⁷ Here, forfeiture does not mean the property automatically escheats to State.³⁸ Rather, the convicted person is treated as if he or she predeceased the victim, so the property distributes according to the will or the state's intestacy statute.³⁹ Some states, like Texas, prohibit forfeiture based on a criminal conviction as declared in the state constitution.⁴⁰ Even if the individual is convicted of the murder, no forfeiture occurs.⁴¹ The only recourse for family members is suing the murderer and receiving possession of the property through a constructive trust.⁴² Family members assert that the convicted individual should not receive the inheritance of the person he or she killed on the theory of unjust enrichment and common sense.⁴³

²⁹ See % Exonerations by Contributing Factor, THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, <http://www.law.umich.edu/special/exoneration/Pages/ExonerationsContribFactorsByCrime.aspx> (last visited Oct. 20, 2017).

³⁰ See generally Dennis Dwyer, What Happens to My Money If I Go to Jail or Prison?, <https://www.dennisdwyerlaw.com/what-happens-to-my-money-if-i-go-to-jail-or-prison> (last visited Jan. 19, 2018) (analyzing what happens to property after a person goes to prison).

³¹ See id.

³² See id.

³³ See id.

³⁴ See 18 U.S.C. §982 (2012).

³⁵ See Sarah Stillman, Taken, THE NEW YORKER (Aug. 12, 2013) <https://www.newyorker.com/magazine/2013/08/12/taken>.

³⁶ See ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §14-2803 (West 2012); CAL. PROB. CODE § 250(a)(1) (West 2016).

³⁷ UNIF. PROB. CODE § 2-803 (amended 2010).

³⁸ See generally id. (stating that the estate passes as if the killer disclaimed his intestate share or predeceased the decedent).

³⁹ Jeffrey G. Sherman, Mercy Killing and the Right to Inherit, 61 U. CIN. L. REV. 803, 851 (1993).

⁴⁰ TEX. CONST. art. I, § 21.

⁴¹ See In re Estate of Stafford, 244 S.W.3d 368, 369–70 (Tex. App.—Beaumont Jan. 17, 2008, no pet.).

⁴² Thompson v. Mayes, 707 S.W.2d 951, 954–55 (Tex. App.—Eastland Apr. 3, 1986, writ ref'd n.r.e.).

⁴³ Id. at 954.

B. Wrongfully Convicted Lose Freedom and Inheritance

If some states do not require a criminal conviction to initiate forfeiture, then wrongfully convicted individuals will be especially disadvantaged.⁴⁴ These innocent people are both presumed to be killers and lose their inheritances and benefits based on faulty evidence or misconduct.⁴⁵ The language of slayer statutes offers a low threshold for property forfeiture through a preponderance of the evidence standard.⁴⁶ Once exonerees leave prison, an uphill battle follows to re-build their lives.⁴⁷ In the case of Noura Jackson, Noura sued her family for an undisclosed amount.⁴⁸ Exonerees should have other options to regain their inheritances or life insurance benefits.⁴⁹ A solution should consider the sensitive interests of families who, at the time, justifiably sued under the slayer statute or plead a constructive trust.⁵⁰

III. BACKGROUND OF SLAYER STATUTES

The idea of the slayer statute rests on fundamental ideas of fairness, public policy, and common sense—a killer should not benefit from his or her evil deeds.⁵¹ Forty-eight states have passed slayer statutes or similar legislation that prohibits killers from inheriting from their murder victims:

- Alabama – Title 43, chapter 8, article 9, section 253 of the Code of Alabama.⁵²
- Alaska – Title 13, chapter 12, section 803 of the Alaska Statutes.⁵³
- Arizona – Title 14, section 2803 of the Arizona Revised Statutes.⁵⁴
- Arkansas – Title 18, chapter 4, section 204 of the Arkansas Code.⁵⁵
- California – Division 2, Part 7, section 250 of the California Probate Code.⁵⁶
- Colorado – Title 15, article 11, part 8, section 803 of the Colorado Revised Statutes.⁵⁷
- Connecticut – Title 45a, section 447 of the Connecticut General Statutes.⁵⁸

⁴⁴ See generally UNIF. PROB. CODE § 2-803(g) (amended 2010) (no conviction required to trigger the Slayer Statute).

⁴⁵ See generally id. (conviction creates conclusive presumption that he or she killed the decedent); Ruppel & Valiente, supra note 13.

⁴⁶ Id.

⁴⁷ Exonerated But Not Free: What Do We Owe the Wrongfully Convicted?, PBS NEWSHOUR (Nov. 9, 2014, 4:00 PM) <http://www.pbs.org/newshour/bb/exonerated-free-toll-varied-justice-system-wrongfully-convicted/>.

⁴⁸ See Broach, supra note 11.

⁴⁹ See Broach, supra note 11.

⁵⁰ See Broach, supra note 11.

⁵¹ UNIF. PROB. CODE § 2-803(f) (amended 2010); see also Riggs v. Palmer, 22 N.E. 188, 188 (N.Y. 1889) (standing for the proposition that state legislatures did not intend to “allow a public mischief or wrong”).

⁵² ALA. CODE § 43-8-253 (1975).

⁵³ ALASKA STAT. ANN. § 13.12.803 (West 1996).

⁵⁴ ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. § 14-2803.

⁵⁵ ARK. CODE ANN. § 18-4-204 (West 2013).

⁵⁶ CAL. PROB. CODE § 250(a)(1).

⁵⁷ COLO. REV. STAT. ANN. § 15-11-803 (West 2011).

⁵⁸ CONN. GEN. STAT. § 45a-447 (West 2016).

- Delaware – Title 12, section 2322 of the Delaware Code.⁵⁹
- Florida – Section 732.802 of the Florida Statutes.⁶⁰
- Georgia – Title 53, chapter 1, section 5 of the Code of Georgia.⁶¹
- Hawai'i – Title 30a, chapter 560, article 2, section 803 of the Hawai'i Revised Statutes.⁶²
- Idaho – Title 15, chapter 2, section 803 of the Idaho Code.⁶³
- Illinois – Chapter 755, act 5, article 2, section 6 of the Illinois Compiled Statutes.⁶⁴
- Indiana – Title 29, article 1, chapter 2, section 12.1 of the Indiana Code.⁶⁵
- Iowa – Title 15, subtitle 4, chapter 633, section 535 of the Iowa Code.⁶⁶
- Kansas – Chapter 59, section 513 of the Kansas Statutes.⁶⁷
- Kentucky – Title 32, chapter 381, section 280 of the Kentucky Revised Statutes.⁶⁸
- Louisiana – Title 1, chapter 5, article 941 of the Louisiana Statutes.⁶⁹
- Maine – Title 18-a, section 2-803 of the Maine Revised Statutes.⁷⁰
- Maryland – Title 11, section 112 of the Maryland Trusts and Estates Code.⁷¹
- Massachusetts – Chapter 265, section 46 of the Massachusetts General Laws.⁷²
- Michigan – Chapter 700, section 2803 of the Michigan Compiled Laws.⁷³
- Minnesota – Chapter 524, section 2-803 of the Minnesota Statutes.⁷⁴
- Mississippi – Title 91, chapter 5, section 33 of the Mississippi Code.⁷⁵
- Montana – Title 72, section 2-813 of the Montana Code.⁷⁶
- Nebraska – Chapter 30, section 2354 of the Revised Statutes of Nebraska.⁷⁷
- Nevada – Title 3, chapter 41B, section 200 of the Nevada Revised Statutes.⁷⁸
- New Jersey – Title 3b, chapter 7, section 1.1 of the New Jersey Statutes.⁷⁹
- New Mexico – Chapter 45, article 2, section 803 of the New Mexico Statutes.⁸⁰

⁵⁹ DEL. CODE ANN. tit. 12, § 2322 (West 1993).

⁶⁰ FLA. STAT. ANN. § 732.802 (West 1982).

⁶¹ GA. CODE ANN. § 53-1-5 (West 1996).

⁶² HAW. REV. STAT. ANN. § 560:2-803 (West 1997).

⁶³ IDAHO CODE ANN. § 15-2-803 (West 1971).

⁶⁴ 755 ILL. COMP. STAT. ANN 5/2-6 (West 1990).

⁶⁵ IND. CODE § 29-1-2-12.1 (West 1984).

⁶⁶ IOWA CODE ANN. § 633.535 (West 2017).

⁶⁷ KAN. STAT. ANN. § 59-513 (West 1995).

⁶⁸ KY. REV. STAT. ANN. § 381.280 (West 2012).

⁶⁹ LA. CIV. CODE ANN. art. 941 (1999).

⁷⁰ ME. REV. STAT. ANN. tit.18-a, § 2-803 (1981).

⁷¹ MD. EST. & TRUSTS CODE § 11-112 (West 2013).

⁷² MASS. GEN. LAWS ANN. ch. 265, § 46 (West 2002).

⁷³ MICH. COMP. LAWS ANN. § 700.2803 (West 2016).

⁷⁴ MINN. STAT. § 524.2-803 (West 2013).

⁷⁵ MISS. CODE ANN. § 91-5-33 (West 2017).

⁷⁶ MONT. CODE ANN. § 72-2-813 (West 1995).

⁷⁷ NEB. REV. STAT. ANN. § 30-2354 (West 2013).

⁷⁸ NEV. REV. STAT. ANN. § 41B.200 (West 1999).

⁷⁹ N.J. STAT. ANN. § 38:7-11 (West 2006).

⁸⁰ N.M. STAT. ANN. § 45-2-803 (West 2012).

- North Carolina – Chapter 31A, section 4 of the North Carolina General Statutes.⁸¹
- North Dakota – Title 30.1, article 2, chapter 30.1-10, section 3 of the North Dakota Century Code.⁸²
- Ohio – Title 21, chapter 2105, section 19 of the Ohio Revised Code.⁸³
- Oklahoma – Title 84, chapter 4, section 231 of the Oklahoma Statutes.⁸⁴
- Oregon – Title 12, chapter 112, section 505 of the Oregon Revised Statutes.⁸⁵
- Pennsylvania – Title 20, sections 8802 through 8815 of the Pennsylvania Statutes and Consolidated Statutes.⁸⁶
- Rhode Island – Title 33, chapter 1.1, section 4 of the General Laws of Rhode Island.⁸⁷
- South Carolina – Title 62, article 2, section 803 of the Code of Laws of South Carolina.⁸⁸
- South Dakota – Chapter 29A-2, section 803 of the South Dakota Codified Laws.⁸⁹
- Tennessee – Title 31, chapter 1, section 106 of the Tennessee Code.⁹⁰
- Utah – Title 75, chapter 2, section 803 of the Utah Code.⁹¹
- Vermont – Title 14, chapter 42, section 322 of the Vermont Statutes.⁹²
- Virginia – Title 64.2, section 2501 of the Code of Virginia.⁹³
- Washington – Title 11, section 11.84.020 of the Revised Code of Washington.⁹⁴
- West Virginia – Chapter 42, article 4, section 2 of the Code of West Virginia.⁹⁵
- Wisconsin – Chapter 854, section 14 of the Wisconsin Statutes.⁹⁶
- Wyoming – Title 2, chapter 14, section 101 of the Wyoming Statutes.⁹⁷

The following states do not have a slayer statute, but address the issue in its case law or constitutions:

- Missouri – Lee v. Aylward.⁹⁸
- New Hampshire – Kelley v. State.⁹⁹

⁸¹ N.C. GEN. STAT. ANN. § 31A-4 (West 1997).

⁸² N.D. CENT. CODE ANN. § 30.1-10-03 (West 1973).

⁸³ OHIO REV. CODE ANN. § 2105.19 (West 1975).

⁸⁴ OKLA. STAT. ANN. tit. 85, § 231 (West 2015).

⁸⁵ OR. REV. STAT. ANN. § 112.505 (West 2005).

⁸⁶ 20 PA. STAT. AND CONS. STAT. ANN. §§ 8802–8815 (West 1972).

⁸⁷ 33 R.I. GEN. LAWS ANN. § 31-1.1-4 (West 1962).

⁸⁸ S.C. CODE ANN. § 62-2-803 (2014).

⁸⁹ S.D. CODIFIED LAWS § 29A-2-803 (1995).

⁹⁰ TENN. CODE ANN. § 31-1-106 (West 2017).

⁹¹ UTAH CODE ANN. § 75-2-803 (West 1998).

⁹² VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 14, § 322 (West 2009).

⁹³ VA. CODE ANN. § 64.2-2501 (West 2012).

⁹⁴ WASH. REV. CODE ANN. § 11.84.020 (West 2009).

⁹⁵ W. VA. CODE ANN. § 42-4-2 (West 2017).

⁹⁶ WIS. STAT. ANN. § 854.14 (West 2017).

⁹⁷ WYO. STAT. ANN. § 2-14-101 (West 1980).

⁹⁸ Lee v. Aylward, 790 S.W.2d 462, 463 (Mo. 1990).

⁹⁹ Kelley v. State, 196 A.2d 68, 69 (N.H. 1963).

- New York – In re Estates of Covert.¹⁰⁰
- Texas – Article 1, Section 21 of the Texas Constitution prohibits forfeiture, unless the murderer is the beneficiary of the victim’s life insurance policy.¹⁰¹

Each jurisdiction describes the requirements, procedure, and consequences differently, but discourage killing loved ones for inheritance and life insurance.¹⁰² Civil and automatic forfeiture, which does not require an action of a court, is a complex and controversial area of the law that varies from state to state.¹⁰³ In the estate law context, instead of the forfeiting property to the government, the court forces individuals to forfeit property to interested parties.¹⁰⁴ An interested party or parties must file a civil suit under the slayer statute against the presumed killer to proceed in collecting the benefits of the will or life insurance policy.¹⁰⁵ Without a civil suit, the convicted killer presumably receives the benefits of the victim.¹⁰⁶ Some states, like Texas, allow a murderer to receive the victim’s inheritance, but not life insurance.¹⁰⁷ These cases most often occur when the relationship is a close familial or blood relation, like parent-child or husband-wife, because most people leave their property to their closest loved ones in wills.¹⁰⁸ Moreover, close family members often inherit through intestacy.¹⁰⁹

Most statutes only require a felonious or intentional killing to trigger the slayer statute.¹¹⁰ However, the statutes do not require a conviction.¹¹¹ A conviction merely creates a presumption that the individual killed the decedent.¹¹² Thus, an individual may be acquitted, but his or her family may sue for the victim’s inheritance through a preponderance of the evidence standard.¹¹³ The types of property and the consequences of the statute vary by jurisdiction.¹¹⁴ The following ¹⁰⁰ In re Estates of Covert, 279 A.D.2d 48, 50 (N.Y. App. Div. 2000); see also Riggs, 22 N.E. at 188.

¹⁰¹ TEX. CONST. art. I, § 21; TEX. INS. CODE ANN. § 1103.151 (West 2014).

¹⁰² Caryl A. Yzenbaard, George Gleason Bogert & George Taylor Bogert, § 478. Property Acquired by Killing Another, LAW OF TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES (June 2017).

¹⁰³ Jason Snead, An Overview of Recent State-Level Forfeiture Reforms, THE HERITAGE FOUNDATION (Aug. 23, 2016), <http://www.heritage.org/crime-and-justice/report/overview-recent-state-level-forfeiture-reforms>.

¹⁰⁴ See Bounds v. Caudle, 560 S.W.2d 925, 925 (Tex. 1977).

¹⁰⁵ See Bazelon supra, note 1.

¹⁰⁶ In re Estate of Kissinger, 206 P.3d 665, 229 (Wash. 2009) (“Most jurisdictions now agree that the better rule is to allow the civil courts to litigate the issue of culpability”).

¹⁰⁷ TEX. EST. CODE ANN. § 201.058 (West 2014).

¹⁰⁸ Kerri Anne Renzulli, Half of Americans Don’t Have a Will. Here’s How to Fix That for Your Family, TIME MONEY (Nov. 30, 2016), <http://time.com/money/4581727/estate-planning-inheritance-leave-money-will/>.

¹⁰⁹ Id.

¹¹⁰ Kevin Spencer, What to Know About the “Slayer Statute” a/k/a the “Killer Laws”, SPENCER LAW, (Oct. 17, 2016), <http://www.spencerlawpc.com/blog/what-to-know-about-the-slayer-statute-aka-the-killer-laws/>.

¹¹¹ Id.

¹¹² Jefferson Grubbs, What Does O.J. Simpson Civil Trial Verdict Mean? “Liable” Does Not Mean Guilty, BUSTLE (Apr. 5, 2016), <https://www.bustle.com/articles/152048-what-does-oj-simpsons-civil-trial-verdict-mean-liable-does-not-mean-guilty>.

¹¹³ Id.

¹¹⁴ See ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §14-2803; CAL. PROB. CODE § 250(a)(1), MD. EST. & TRUSTS CODE § 11-112; TENN. CODE ANN. § 31-1-106.

subsections outline the historical development of slayer statutes and how some jurisdictions address this issue.¹¹⁵

A. Common Law

In common law England, a slayer could not inherit from his or her victim under a number of equitable theories.¹¹⁶ All real and personal property escheated to the Crown following any type of conviction.¹¹⁷ The Founding Fathers rejected forfeiture, or attainder, and abolished it in the Constitution.¹¹⁸ Without attainder, the question remained if a murderer could inherit from his or her victim.¹¹⁹ Some judges observed the inherent problem in this construction of inheritance statutes, and devised an equitable theory from common law that no man should profit from his or her wrongs.¹²⁰ Over the years, state legislatures developed slayer statutes that sought to fill in gaps in the law that allowed murderers to profit from their crimes.¹²¹

B. Each State Takes a Different Approach

States approach the slayer problem differently.¹²² While sixteen states adopted the Uniform Probate Code formulation, others implement different wording or lack a statute addressing this issue.¹²³ Texas and New Hampshire are two of these states, both addressing the issue in case law without a codified slayer statute.¹²⁴

i. Forfeiture of Estate

According to the Uniform Probate Code, a conviction for an intentional and felonious killing triggers the consequences of the slayer statute.¹²⁵ If the jury convicts the defendant, the analysis ends—the court concludes the person feloniously or intentionally brought about the death of the decedent.¹²⁶ Without a conviction, the court must find by a preponderance of the evidence that the person feloniously or intentionally brought about the death of the decedent.¹²⁷ As a result, the person forfeits all benefits under the statute and is treated as if he disclaimed his intestate share.¹²⁸

¹¹⁵ See infra Sections A-B.

¹¹⁶ Carla Spivack, Killers Shouldn't Inherit From Their Victims—Or Should They?, 48 GA. L. REV. 145, 152 (2013).

¹¹⁷ Id. at 153.

¹¹⁸ Id. at 152.

¹¹⁹ Id. at 153.

¹²⁰ Id.

¹²¹ Id. at 154.

¹²² Id. at 169.

¹²³ Uniform Probate Code, LEGAL INFORMATION INSTITUTE, <https://www.law.cornell.edu/uniform/probate> (last visited Jan. 21, 2018).

¹²⁴ See Kelley, 196 A.2d 68, 70 (N.H. 1963); Bounds v. Caudle, 560 S.W.2d 925, 925 (Tex. 1977).

¹²⁵ UNIF. PROB. CODE § 2-803(f).

¹²⁶ Id.

¹²⁷ Id.

¹²⁸ Id.

Arizona adopted the Uniform Probate Code and expresses the beneficiary's loss as a forfeiture.¹²⁹ The language of the Arizona statute reads, "A person who feloniously and intentionally kills the decedent forfeits all benefits under this chapter with respect to the decedent's estate."¹³⁰ Not only does the disqualified person not inherit from the decedent, but he or she may not act in a representative or fiduciary capacity.¹³¹ The disqualified individual is treated as if he or she predeceased the decedent, and the next beneficiaries in line will receive their proportionate shares.¹³²

In Castro v. Ballesteros-Suarez, a widow was a suspected of murdering her husband.¹³³ She was also the beneficiary of his life insurance policy.¹³⁴ The insurance company filed an interpleader and requested that the court determine the rightful beneficiary of the policy because the widow was both the beneficiary and murder suspect.¹³⁵ The Arizona slayer statute applied without a conviction to prevent the widow from collecting the life insurance.¹³⁶ Without direct evidence, circumstantial evidence was sufficient to show that she was responsible for the death of her husband by a preponderance of the evidence.¹³⁷

Under the California Probate Code, a person is disqualified from receiving a long list of a decedent's property, interests, or other benefits if the person feloniously and intentionally kills the decedent.¹³⁸ This statute highlights the state's interest in protecting certain types of property.¹³⁹ In probate, the killer is treated as "dead" in the eyes of the law.¹⁴⁰ In other words, the slayer is treated as if he predeceased the decedent.¹⁴¹ In a recent case, the victim's child was next in line to inherit, so the interpleader funds were deposited into an account and the court later ordered the life insurance company to pay out as if the killer husband predeceased the wife.¹⁴²

Another case, People v. Jessee, discusses California's slayer statute in detail.¹⁴³ A jury convicted a woman of conspiring to murder her husband.¹⁴⁴ Her conviction fell squarely within California's slayer statute.¹⁴⁵ The statute expressly provides that a convicted murderer may not

¹²⁹ ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §14-2803.

¹³⁰ See id.

¹³¹ See id.

¹³² See id.

¹³³ Castro v. Ballesteros-Suarez, 213 P.3d 197, 199 (Ct. App. 2009).

¹³⁴ Id.

¹³⁵ Id. at 206.

¹³⁶ Id. at 199.

¹³⁷ Id. at 203.

¹³⁸ CAL. PROB. CODE § 250(a)(1).

¹³⁹ See id.

¹⁴⁰ See id.

¹⁴¹ CAL. PROB. CODE § 250(b)(1) (West 2016).

¹⁴² Sidorov Estate of Natalya v. Transamerica Life Ins. Co., 2017 WL 2911676 at *1 (E.D. Cal. Jul. 7, 2017).

¹⁴³ See People v. Jessee, 222 Cal. App. 4th 501, 507–08 (2013).

¹⁴⁴ See id. at 503.

¹⁴⁵ See id.

receive any portion of the victim's estate either through a will or intestacy.¹⁴⁶ As a direct result of the statute's forfeiture language, the defendant disclaimed the life insurance benefits.¹⁴⁷

Tennessee law similarly indicates that a slayer forfeits all benefits of the defendants.¹⁴⁸ Under this statute, Noura Jackson's family initiated a civil suit while Noura was on trial for her mother's murder.¹⁴⁹ The family had every right to initiate a suit against Noura because she was the only child of the victim and would receive her mother's $1.5 million estate.¹⁵⁰ Noura was on trial for her mother's murder, but Tennessee does not require a conviction for Noura aunts and uncles to prevail under the slayer statute.¹⁵¹ The relatives must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that Noura feloniously and intentionally brought about the death of her mother.¹⁵² The relatives successfully carried their burden and stripped Noura of her mother's $1.5 million estate.¹⁵³

ii. Staying the Proceeding

Maryland requires a final judgment before resolving a civil suit against a disqualified person.¹⁵⁴ The trade-off to staying the final judgment in the criminal matter is the family must wait.¹⁵⁵ According to the Maryland slayer statute, the interested parties assert their rights but the proceeding will be stayed pending a final judgment in the criminal case.¹⁵⁶ This provision provides an opportunity to postpone the civil case until the resolution of the criminal case.¹⁵⁷

A beneficiary may become disqualified even if he is not charged with murder, but rather if he or she conspired to kill the decedent.¹⁵⁸ Relative to other states' slayer statutes, this is considered a harsh rule that is also reflected in the state's case law.¹⁵⁹ The statute is particularly harsh because it incorporates "corruption of blood" language, prohibiting decedents of the murderer from inheriting.¹⁶⁰ In a civil proceeding, final conviction for murder is conclusive for purposes of the ¹⁴⁶ See id.

¹⁴⁷ See id. at 510.

¹⁴⁸ TENN. CODE ANN. § 31-1-106.

¹⁴⁹ See Bazelon supra, note 1.

¹⁵⁰ TENN. CODE ANN. § 31-1-106.

¹⁵¹ See id.

¹⁵² See id.

¹⁵³ See Bazelon, supra note 1.

¹⁵⁴ MD. EST. & TRUSTS CODE § 11-112 (West 2013) (On request of a party in a civil proceeding in which a person is alleged to be a disqualified person, the civil proceeding shall be stayed pending a final judgment in a case in which the alleged disqualified person is criminally charged with feloniously and intentionally killing, conspiring to kill, or procuring the killing of the decedent). Id.

¹⁵⁵ Id.

¹⁵⁶ Id.

¹⁵⁷ Id.

¹⁵⁸ Id.

¹⁵⁹ Minia E. Bremenstul, Comment, Victim's in Life, Victims in Death—Keeping Burial Rights Out of the Hands of Slayers, 74 LA. L. REV. 213, 221 n. 51 (2013).

¹⁶⁰ See Chase v. Jenifer, 150 A.2d 251, 257 (Apr. 16, 1959) (citing Price v. Hitaffer, 165 A. 470, 470 (Apr. 5, 1933)).

statute.¹⁶¹ The “conclusive” language illustrates the strong public policy to prevent an individual from recovering from the victim-testator.¹⁶²

Despite the harsh nature of the statute, an individual may overcome the presumption against him.¹⁶³ A person may seek declaratory relief if the court finds that he or she was in fact not a disqualified individual following review.¹⁶⁴ The statute also provides for “other relief,” but provides little specificity about the meaning of that phrase.¹⁶⁵

iii. No Forfeiture: Court Imposes Constructive Trust

At common law, individuals and their decedents could not inherit property if they were convicted of a heinous crime at common law.¹⁶⁶ “Corruption of blood” is now prohibited under the Texas Constitution.¹⁶⁷ Article 1, section 21 of the Texas Constitution states, “no conviction shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture of estate.”¹⁶⁸ The state’s strong policy against forfeiture creates barriers for individuals to lose property based solely on a criminal conviction.¹⁶⁹ The corruption of blood language appears in the Texas Estates Code with a carved out exception.¹⁷⁰ A person must forfeit his or her life insurance benefits if he or she is convicted of willfully bringing about the death of the testator.¹⁷¹ Despite the strict language of the statute, a beneficiary may lose inheritance through a constructive trust remedy.¹⁷²

The explicit rejection of the corruption of blood must be squared with preventing a murderous beneficiary from recovering the estate of the testator.¹⁷³ Texas courts prohibit killers from receiving life insurance, but allows them to inherit from a will.¹⁷⁴ However, courts create constructive trusts to balance the interests of surviving beneficiaries with murderers’ constitutional rights.¹⁷⁵

In a Texas Supreme Court case, Bounds v. Caudle, Dr. Bounds was convicted of negligent homicide of his wife, Mrs. Bounds.¹⁷⁶ His stepchildren sued him for wrongful death and the Court

¹⁶¹ See MD. EST. & TRUSTS CODE § 11-112 (West 2013).

¹⁶² See id.

¹⁶³ See id.

¹⁶⁴ See id.

¹⁶⁵ See id.

¹⁶⁶ David F. Johnson & Joseph R. Regan, Texas Fiduciary Litigation Update: 2015-2016, WINSTEAD, P.C. <http://www.txfiduciaryliterator.com/files/2016/09/2016-Fiduciary-Litigation-Update.pdf> (last visited Oct. 19, 2017).

¹⁶⁷ TEX. CONST. art. I, § 21.

¹⁶⁸ Id.

¹⁶⁹ See Arredondo v. Dugger, 347 S.W.3d 757, 765 (Tex. App—Dallas May 31, 2011, pet. granted).

¹⁷⁰ TEX. EST. CODE ANN. § 201.058 (West 2014).

¹⁷¹ Id.

¹⁷² Bounds v. Caudle, 560 S.W.2d 925, 925 (Tex. 1977).

¹⁷³ See id.

¹⁷⁴ See TEX. INS. CODE ANN. § 1103.151.

¹⁷⁵ See generally Bounds, 560 S.W.2d at 928 (the court creates a constructive trust to pass title from the killer to the rightful heirs).

¹⁷⁶ Id. at 925.

imposed a constructive trust to transfer the property from Dr. Bounds to the remaining beneficiaries.¹⁷⁷ To prevent unjust enrichment, the Court took an equitable approach whereby the murderer maintains legal title to the inherited property, but it is held in a constructive trust that compels him to surrender possession to the beneficiaries.¹⁷⁸ The trust transfers equitable title to the beneficiaries of the trust.¹⁷⁹ The public policy behind unjust enrichment prevents killing for profit, an unconscionable mode of acquisition.¹⁸⁰ The judge in the Bounds probate proceedings created a constructive trust in favor of the children over the deceased's property, which would have passed to Dr. Bounds had he not murdered his wife.¹⁸¹ These types of wrongful death suits suspend the strong public policy behind maintaining family unity because willful or intentional torts often disrupt the domestic unit anyway.¹⁸²

Another Texas case, In re Huffhines, involved a husband who shot his wife and turned the gun on himself.¹⁸³ The couple opened a joint bank account together and the deceased wife's sister asked the Court to exclude the husband's heirs from acquiring the assets.¹⁸⁴ The victim's estate must "plead for the imposition of a constructive trust over the property to be inherited by the murderer."¹⁸⁵ Although there is a general proposition that a spouse may not inherit from the other spouse he killed, an interested party must still assert the constructive trust remedy.¹⁸⁶

In In re Stafford, the Beaumont Court of Appeals sought to designate a beneficiary for a murdered policy holder.¹⁸⁷ Her husband was convicted of her murder and forfeited his right to his wife's life insurance policy outright.¹⁸⁸ This case reiterates that probate actions are the vehicle in which interested parties can gain inheritance from a beneficiary who procured the death of the insured.¹⁸⁹ The law does not require a final judgment.¹⁹⁰ This action may occur while the individual is appealing the murder conviction.¹⁹¹

New Hampshire lacks a slayer statute.¹⁹² Like Texas, New Hampshire courts impose constructive trusts.¹⁹³ In Kelley v. State, a husband was convicted of second-degree murder for killing his wife.¹⁹⁴ For interested parties, like the deceased's family, to prevail in a constructive

¹⁷⁷ Id.

¹⁷⁸ See Parks v. Dumas, 321 S.W.2d 653, 655 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth Feb. 13, 1959, no writ).

¹⁷⁹ Bounds, 560 S.W.2d at 928.

¹⁸⁰ See Parks, 321 S.W.2d at 655.

¹⁸¹ Bounds, 560 S.W.2d at 928.

¹⁸² Id. at 927.

¹⁸³ In re Huffhines, 2016 WL 1714171 at *1 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth Apr. 28, 2016, pet. denied).

¹⁸⁴ Id.

¹⁸⁵ See id. at *7.

¹⁸⁶ Id.

¹⁸⁷ In re Stafford, 244 S.W.3d 368, 369 (Tex App.—Beaumont Jan. 17, 2017, no pet.).

¹⁸⁸ Id.

¹⁸⁹ See id. at 370.

¹⁹⁰ See id.

¹⁹¹ See id. at 369.

¹⁹² Jeffrey G. Sherman, Mercy Killing and the Right to Inherit, 61 U. CIN. L. REV. 803, 805 (1993).

¹⁹³ See Kelley v. State, 196 A.2d 68, 69 (N.H. 1963).

¹⁹⁴ Id.

trust, they must prove unjust enrichment from the victim's estate.¹⁹⁵ The husband prevailed because he proved he contributed more financially to the marriage.¹⁹⁶ This case demonstrates that the constructive trust remedy may fail if no unjust enrichment follows the disposition of the victim's property.¹⁹⁷

IV. OVERLAP OF TWO SYSTEMS

Once a person is exonerated for his crimes, the issue of the lost inheritance remains.¹⁹⁸ The civil and criminal realms of the law remain separate, but now the presumption of feloniously causing the death of the decedent becomes erroneous due to DNA evidence or other exonerating evidence.¹⁹⁹ This situation highlights flaws of two systems: compensation statutes and slayer statutes.²⁰⁰ In most states, compensation statutes for exonerees are grossly inadequate and slayer statutes do not account for the possibility of exonerated individuals to regain inheritances or life insurance benefits.²⁰¹

The interest in keeping inheritance and benefits out of the hands of murderers must be squared with the rights of exonerated individuals who were stripped of inheritance after they were accused of murder.²⁰² A person finally proves his or her innocence, yet the battle continues.²⁰³ The person may wish to recover the lost inheritance he or she forfeited.²⁰⁴ Like Noura Jackson, justice may not be realized if exonerees sue their families.²⁰⁵ While exonerees attempt to rebuild their lives, they must simultaneously face their families in court to fight for what they lost.²⁰⁶ Most states already face challenges of compensating the wrongfully convicted.²⁰⁷ No state has a plan for exonerees who lost inheritances or life insurance other than suing the families.²⁰⁸

¹⁹⁵ Id. at 71.

¹⁹⁶ Id.

¹⁹⁷ Id.

¹⁹⁸ See generally NRE: Compensation for Exonerees, THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS (Sept. 11, 2017),

<http://www.law.umich.edu/special/exoneration/Documents/Compensation%20for%20Exonerees%20Primer.pdf> (exonerees continue to be shafted by society through inadequate compensation statutes).

¹⁹⁹ See generally Ion Meyn, The Unbearable Lightness of Criminal Procedure, 42 AM. J. CRIM. L. 39, 41 (2014) (highlighting the different consequences of the criminal and civil systems in United States jurisprudence).

²⁰⁰ See generally id.

²⁰¹ See 81% of Exonerated People Who Have Been Compensated Under State Laws Received Less than the Federal Standard, New Innocence Project Report Shows, INNOCENCE PROJECT (Dec. 2, 2009), <https://www.innocenceproject.org/81-of-exonerated-people-who-have-been-compensated-under-state-laws-received-less-than-the-federal-standard-new-innocence-project-report-shows/>.

²⁰² See Bazelon supra, note 1.

²⁰³ See Bazelon supra, note 1.

²⁰⁴ Ruppel & Valiente, supra note 13.

²⁰⁵ Bazelon, supra note 1.

²⁰⁶ See Bazelon, supra note 1.

²⁰⁷ See generally THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, supra note 198.

²⁰⁸ See Broach, supra note 11.

A. Compensating Exonerees

When a person is exonerated of a crime through DNA evidence, he or she gains freedom but is beholden to the state's compensation statutes.²⁰⁹ Among jurisdictions, the range of possible payment schemes varies widely.²¹⁰ Florida allows $50 million per year of wrongful incarceration with a maximum of $2 million payout, while California provides a maximum of $100 per day in prison in its statute.²¹¹ The disparity between statutes demonstrates a lack of unity among states about how to treat the wrongfully convicted.²¹² The compensation process often takes years.²¹³ While nothing can make up for the years spent in prison, states should reexamine their compensation statutes and take the first step of rebuilding lost lives.²¹⁴

B. Facing the Harshness of Slayer Statutes

Slayer statutes provide harsh consequences despite low standards of burden.²¹⁵ In a civil proceeding to decide the disposition of the decedent's estate, a family member or interested party must assert the slayer statute and prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the individual is criminally responsible or brought about the death of the decedent.²¹⁶ Most states require that the killing is felonious or intentional.²¹⁷ Some jurisdictions, like the District of Columbia, include negligent killings in their slayer statutes.²¹⁸ Even if a court overturns the murder conviction, a reversal does not affect the civil judgment.²¹⁹

V. SOLUTIONS

Aside from suing their families for lost inheritance, exonerees should be able to exercise more tenable and cost-effective methods of compensation.²²⁰ While compensation statutes may only cover part of the solution, the state should provide more relief to wrongfully convicted

²⁰⁹ THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, supra note 198.

²¹⁰ THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, supra note 198.

²¹¹ THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, supra note 198; see also Wrongful Conviction Compensation Statutes, CNN, <http://www.cnn.com/interactive/2012/03/us/table.wrongful.convictions/> (last visited Feb. 6, 2018).

²¹² Compensating the Wrongfully Convicted, INNOCENCE PROJECT, <https://www.innocenceproject.org/compensating-wrongly-convicted/> (last visited Jan 21, 2018).

²¹³ THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS, supra note 198.

²¹⁴ See generally Deborah Mostaghel, Wrongfully Incarcerated, Randomly Compensated—How to Fund Wrongful-Conviction Compensation Statutes, 44 IND. L. REV. 503, 522 (2011) (freeing an innocent person from prison is not the final step in compensation).

²¹⁵ See Spivack, supra note 116 at 208.

²¹⁶ See Spivack, supra note 116 at 217.

²¹⁷ See Spivack, supra note 116 at 156.

²¹⁸ See Spivack, supra note 116 at 158; D.C. CODE ANN. § 19-320 (2012).

²¹⁹ See generally Ion Meyn, The Unbearable Lightness of Criminal Procedure, 42 AM. J. CRIM. L. 39, 41 (2014) (highlighting the different consequences of the criminal and civil systems in United States jurisprudence).

²²⁰ See infra Sections A-E.

individuals.²²¹ Legislatures must ensure that compensation statutes are robust and fair.²²² With the rising numbers of exonerations in recent years, the need for more robust compensation statutes should be at the forefront of state legislatures' agendas.²²³ If state legislatures fail to improve their compensation statutes, then the states should contribute to the legal fees if the exoneree chooses to sue his or her family.²²⁴ When a person spends years behind bars, he or she often lacks the skills or resources to successfully navigate a lawsuit.²²⁵ The person may also choose to sue the government in tort instead of the family.²²⁶ Some slayer statutes allow the statute to go into effect once appeals are exhausted or stay the proceeding pending final judgment from the criminal case.²²⁷

A. Sue the Family

The conventional solution for people like Noura Jackson is to sue their families.²²⁸ This option risks interpersonal and interfamilial conflict.²²⁹ Forcing exonerees to sue their families only deepens divisions originating from the conviction and time spent in prison.²³⁰ At the moment, this is the only solution for exonerees.²³¹ After an individual is exonerated of murder, his main goal should be re-integration into society and establishing a normal life.²³² Alternative dispute resolution mitigates the stress of typical litigation, but more options should be available to exonerees who lost their inheritances.²³³

B. More Robust Compensation Statutes

If more innocent people are being released from prison, state laws should provide a clearer path to recover, even if it is not the actual inheritance amount.²³⁴ Legislatures should enact a better compensation schemes for the wrongfully accused.²³⁵ Article 3 of the European Convention on ²²¹ See infra Sections C, D.

²²² See infra Section B.

²²³ See generally NRE: Compensation for Exonerees, THE NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS (Sept. 11, 2017) (private bills passed in state legislatures are uncommon).

²²⁴ See infra Section C.

²²⁵ PBS NEWSHOUR supra note 47.

²²⁶ See infra Section D.

²²⁷ See infra Section E.

²²⁸ Broach, supra note 11.

²²⁹ See generally Daniel Taylor, 5 Things to Consider Before Suing Your Relative, FIND LAW (Sept. 10, 2014, 7:00 AM), http://blogs.findlaw.com/law_and_life/2014/09/5-things-to-consider-before-suing-your-relative.html (suing a family member may cause more conflict).

²³⁰ See generally Erik Encarnacion, Why and How to Compensate Exonerees, 114 MICH. L. REV. FIRST IMPRESSIONS 139 (addressing the broader fairness themes of compensation schemes).

²³¹ Broach, supra note 11.

²³² See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²³³ See infra Sections B-E.

²³⁴ See generally Deborah Mostaghel, Wrongfully Incarcerated, Randomly Compensated—How to Fund Wrongful-Conviction Compensation Statutes, 44 IND. L. REV. 503, 523–24 (2011) (analyzing the challenges of funding and executing compensation schemes).

²³⁵ Id.

Human Rights requires compensation of wrongful convictions.²³⁶ In fact, these types of cases are sometimes classified as human rights violations and appear before the European Court of Human Rights (HUDOC).²³⁷ In a notable HUDOC case, an Armenian citizen was charged with rape and murder after providing a confession under duress.²³⁸ The police fabricated other evidence and a court sentenced him to fifteen years in prison.²³⁹ The Armenian government compensated the wrongfully incarcerated man for emotional distress, anxiety, inconvenience, among other intentional torts.²⁴⁰ He spent five years and six months incarcerated for crimes he did not commit.²⁴¹ Even when national laws do not provide non-pecuniary damages, the wrongfully convicted individual receives those damages as well.²⁴²

The United States lacks a clear and mandatory compensation scheme.²⁴³ Without one, the disparity between states remains stark.²⁴⁴ Modes of compensation include civil lawsuits, private bills, and other means.²⁴⁵ Without a comprehensive and uniform scheme, exonerees remain tethered to whatever statute currently exists in their states.²⁴⁶ The federal government recommends that exonerees be compensated up to $50,000 per year, but eighty-one percent of eligible people receive far less.²⁴⁷ Most exonerees wait three years, on average, to receive any compensation.²⁴⁸ Some states require a governor's pardon to receive compensation.²⁴⁹ This decision may be motivated by politics and the desire to ensure the public that the right people receive repayment.²⁵⁰

Often, money fails to undo the years of pain and suffering an innocent person experiences behind bars.²⁵¹ Social services and non-monetary compensation present challenges that are both hard to quantify and difficult to implement.²⁵² State legislatures often stop at monetary compensation without considering holistic solutions.²⁵³ Most exonerees leave prison without support, transportation, insurance, or education, among other essential services.²⁵⁴ Only ten states

²³⁶ Innocence and Wrongful Conviction, CORNELL LAW SCHOOL (Mar. 14, 2016), <http://www.deathpenaltyworldwide.org/wrongful-convictions.cfm#a1-2>

²³⁷ Id.

²³⁸ Poghosyan and Baghdasaryan v. Armenia, no. 22999/06, §2, ECHR 2012-III.

²³⁹ Id.

²⁴⁰ CORNELL LAW SCHOOL, supra note 236.

²⁴¹ Poghosyan and Baghdasaryan, no. 22999/06, §2.

²⁴² Id.

²⁴³ CORNELL LAW SCHOOL, supra note 236.

²⁴⁴ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁴⁵ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁴⁶ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁴⁷ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁴⁸ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁴⁹ 705 ILL. COMP. STAT. ANN. 505/8 (West 2009); MD. CODE ANN., STATE FIN. & Proc. § 10-501 (West 2017); N.C. GEN. STAT. ANN. § 148-82 (West 2012); TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 103.001 (West 2011).

²⁵⁰ Shawn Armbrust, Note, When Money Isn't Enough: The Case for Holistic Compensation of the Wrongfully Convicted, 41 AM. CRIM. L. REV. 157, 166 (2004)

²⁵¹ Id. at 182.

²⁵² See generally id. (highlighting the inadequacy of existing remedies for the wrongfully convicted).

²⁵³ Id. at 173.

²⁵⁴ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

mention services in their compensation statutes.²⁵⁵ According to the Innocence Project, a meager fifteen exonerees have received social support through these services.²⁵⁶ Holistic measures would ensure that these people are being repaid with more than just money.²⁵⁷ The goal should be to reintroduce exonerees into society with the least number of barriers.²⁵⁸ The problem with some post-incarceration vocational programs is that exonerees do not meet the key qualification of having a criminal record.²⁵⁹ For example, a New Jersey man named David Shepard was exonerated after eleven years in prison, but was ineligible for post-incarceration services because the law required a criminal conviction.²⁶⁰ A separate program for exonerees or a special exemption in the current programs would solve this problem.²⁶¹

C. The Government Foots (Part of) the Bill

State legislatures should pass bills requiring states to partially contribute to compensating an individual who wants to sue his or her family for lost inheritance.²⁶² While these types of funds are costly for states, a fund may help wrongfully convicted individuals pay for future lawsuits.²⁶³ In the event that a person faces this challenge, the state should compensate exonerees for depriving them of their fundamental right to freedom.²⁶⁴ Although rare, a state may be ordered to pay attorney's fees, which could help compensate with some amount of money.²⁶⁵

As early as 1941, the public acknowledged that compensating wrongfully incarcerated individuals was essential for preventing further miscarriage of justice.²⁶⁶ Today, determining who bears the cost of this tragic mistake remains a problem.²⁶⁷ Normally, fines imposed during sentencings contribute to victims' funds.²⁶⁸ However, in exoneration cases, a philosophical approach involves taxpayers in the compensation scheme.²⁶⁹ Edwin Borchard, a former Yale Law School professor, provides some insight into this predicament for taxpayers and legislators:

²⁵⁵ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁵⁶ See INNOCENCE PROJECT, supra note 201.

²⁵⁷ See Armbrust, supra note 250 at 173.

²⁵⁸ See Armbrust, supra note 250 at 175.

²⁵⁹ See Armbrust, supra note 250 at 175.

²⁶⁰ Armbrust, supra note 250 at 175–76.

²⁶¹ See generally Shawn Armbrust, Note, When Money Isn't Enough: The Case for Holistic Compensation of the Wrongfully Convicted, 41 AM. CRIM. L. REV. 157, 173 (2004) (emphasizing that most exonerees lack experience handling money, while incorporating social services provide a better solution for this population).

²⁶² See generally Edwin Borchard, State Indemnity for Errors of Criminal Justice, 21 B.U. L. REV. 201, 201 (1941) (recognizing the need for legislation in the area of compensating the wrongfully convicted).

²⁶³ See Mostaghel, supra note 214 at 544.

²⁶⁴ Borchard, supra note 262 at 208.

²⁶⁵ See Stephanie Slifer, How the Wrongfully Convicted are Compensated for Years Lost, CBS NEWS (Mar. 27, 2014, 6:33 AM) <https://www.cbsnews.com/news/how-the-wrongfully-convicted-are-compensated/>.

²⁶⁶ Borchard, supra note 262 at 201.

²⁶⁷ Mostaghel, supra note 214 at 523.

²⁶⁸ Mostaghel, supra note 214 at 523.

²⁶⁹ Borchard, supra note 262 at 208.

We have recognized, in certain spheres of activity, that it is unfair to the individuals injured that they alone should bear the entire loss resulting from the accident, and therefore society distributes the loss among its members. Where the common interest is joined for a common end—maintaining the public peace by the prosecution of crime—each individual member being subject to the same danger (erroneous conviction), the loss when it occurs should be borne by the community as a whole and not by the injured individual alone.²⁷⁰

Forcing taxpayers pay for matters better suited for private litigants may trigger negative political consequences.²⁷¹ Taxpayers bear no relation to these inheritance matters and they may oppose increasing taxes to fund special compensation statutes for exonerees.²⁷²

D. An Exoneree Sues the Government in Tort In Lieu of Family Suit

Exonerees who lost their inheritances should sue the government in tort rather than their families.²⁷³ In some states, a showing of legal disability apart from imprisonment may entitle a prisoner to toll the statute of limitations.²⁷⁴ If the exoneree can prove that the wrongful imprisonment prevented him from bringing the action against the state, then tolling the statute of limitations will succeed.²⁷⁵ However, many states do not recognize tolling statute of limitations for prisoner claims.²⁷⁶ As a solution, state legislatures may carve out an exception for this small group of people who neither fall under the discovery rule or another applicable scenario that tolls the statute of limitations.²⁷⁷

A person may choose to settle with his or her family, but suing the government for exactly what was lost—the amount of the inheritance—may offer superior relief.²⁷⁸ Unlike private tortfeasors, the government does not convict these exonerees for profit, but rather for political or other purposes.²⁷⁹ While sovereign immunity may impede these efforts, some states provide a waiver of immunity for some types of suits.²⁸⁰ It is unclear whether suing the government in tort is a feasible option in light of doubt expressed by some courts.²⁸¹

²⁷⁰ Borchard, supra note 262 at 208.

²⁷¹ Lawrence Rosenthal, A Theory of Government Damages in Liability: Torts, Constitutional Torts, and Takings, 9 U. PA. J. CONST. L. 797, 798–99 (2007).

²⁷² Id.

²⁷³ See Mostaghel, supra note 215 at 537.

²⁷⁴ Gordon v. Connell, 545 N.W.2d 722, 724 (Neb. Apr. 5, 1996).

²⁷⁵ Contra Little v. Smith, 943 S.W.2d 414, 420 (Tex. 1997); See generally Bianchi v. Bellingham Police Dept., 909 F.2d 1316, 1319 (9th Cir. 1990) (prisoner entitled to state tolling the statute under Washington law);

²⁷⁶ Gordon, 545 N.W.2d at 724.

²⁷⁷ See Bianchi, 909 F.2d at 1319.

²⁷⁸ Ruppel & Valiente, supra note 13.

²⁷⁹ Mostaghel, supra note 214 at 510.

²⁸⁰ State Sovereign Immunity and Tort Liability, NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF STATE LEGISLATURES (Sept. 8, 2010), <http://www.ncsl.org/research/transportation/state-sovereign-immunity-and-tort-liability.aspx>.

²⁸¹ See Rosenthal, supra note 271 at 799.

E. Nobody Receives the Money Until Appeals are Exhausted

Another possible solution is putting the inheritance money in a fund until appeals are exhausted.²⁸² According to the Bureau of Justice Statistics, the median length of an appeal process from notice of appeal to final resolution is 421 days.²⁸³ These statistics do not include death penalty cases, and the length of the process varies by the type of court and whether the case was reviewed on the merits.²⁸⁴ The main problem with this solution is the family must wait to recover the inheritance and it will sit in a vault until the presumed killer exhausts his or her appeals or completes a re-trial.²⁸⁵ From the perspective of the family seeking the inheritance, sequestering the money may amount to an unusual form of governmental taking.²⁸⁶ Although it is not a perfect solution, delaying the process ensures more fairness than the current compensation statutes.²⁸⁷

In reality, this would not be a tenable option.²⁸⁸ This would be both unfair, illogical, and would intensify the pain that victims' families already experience during appeals and new trials.²⁸⁹ Often, DNA evidence is re-examined or evidence of prosecutorial misconduct or false confessions emerge years or decades after the final judgment.²⁹⁰ The courts must balance the rights of the exonerees with the need for finality in probate.²⁹¹

A takings-based argument emphasizes the constitutional angle of compensating the wrongfully convicted.²⁹² The government should compensate exonerated individuals because the losses they suffered directly resulted from the government misappropriating their property without just compensation.²⁹³ Many European countries use this model in their compensation schemes.²⁹⁴ In the wrongful incarceration context, the government seized the wrongfully convicted person's ²⁸² See generally Deborah Mostaghel, Wrongfully Incarcerated, Randomly Compensated—How to Fund Wrongful-Conviction Compensation Statutes, 44 IND. L. REV. 503, 503–504 (2011) (outlining various funding options for the wrongfully convicted).

²⁸³ Nicole L. Walters, et al., Criminal Appeals in State Courts, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE (Sept. 2015), <https://www.bjs.gov/content/pub/pdf/casc.pdf>.

²⁸⁴ Id.

²⁸⁵ See Thomasi McDonald & Anne Blythie, Jason Young Wont' Get a Third Trial in 2006 Slaying of His Pregnant Wife, THE NEWS & OBSERVER (Aug. 29, 2017, 6:25 PM), <http://www.newsobserver.com/news/local/crime/article170089137.html>.

²⁸⁶ See Asset Forfeiture Abuse, ACLU, <https://www.aclu.org/issues/criminal-law-reform/reforming-police-practices/asset-forfeiture-abuse> (Last visited Nov. 10, 2017).

²⁸⁷ PBS NEWSHOUR supra note 47.

²⁸⁸ Rosenthal, supra note 271 at 799.

²⁸⁹ See McDonald & Blythie, supra note 285.

²⁹⁰ See Changes in DNA Exoneration Over Time, NATIONAL REGISTRY OF EXONERATIONS (Apr. 18, 2016), http://www.law.umich.edu/special/exoneration/Documents/Changes_In_DNA_Exonerations.pdf

²⁹¹ Little v. Smith, 943 S.W.2d 414, 417 (Tex. 1997);

²⁹² Howard Master, Note, Revisiting the Takings-Based Argument for Compensating the Wrongfully Convicted, 60 N.Y.U. ANN. SURV. AM. L. 97, 97 (2004) (citing Edwin M. Borchard, European Systems of State Indemnity for Errors of Criminal Justice, 3 J. CRIM. L. & CRIMINOLOGY 684, 685 (Mar. 1913)).

²⁹³ Id.

²⁹⁴ See Edwin Borchard, European Systems of State Indemnity for Errors of Criminal Justice, 3 J. AM. INST. CRIM. L. & CRIMINOLOGY 684, 687 (1913).

liberty.²⁹⁵ Thus, the individual should be compensated for lost time and labor.²⁹⁶ Eminent domain principles protect labor as a form of property.²⁹⁷ Therefore, the government wrongfully took labor from convicted individuals through incarceration.²⁹⁸ The takings argument is more relevant for the exonerated individual who lost his or her inheritance.²⁹⁹ The government should compensate individual for their lost property that was taken without any compensation.³⁰⁰ The goals of compensation include social insurance and morality, so the incentives outweigh the actual numbers.³⁰¹

VI. CONCLUSION

Some overlaps may never be resolved without legislative intervention because they involve two different goals.³⁰² The most satisfactory solution to the exoneree-beneficiary problem is pushing some of the burden back on the state to compensate individuals.³⁰³ While this solution may not be personalized to exonerees, it provides a convincing next step in compensating individuals who lost more than liberty.³⁰⁴

In reality, the solution to the exoneree-beneficiary problem should encompass a combination of solutions.³⁰⁵ While every solution contains shortcomings, the exoneree can choose from a wide range of options apart from suing his or her family.³⁰⁶ At the moment, exonerees may only sue their families to receive adequate compensation.³⁰⁷ More options increase the likelihood exonerees will be made whole.³⁰⁸

Inevitable gaps appear in statutes that do not account for every situation.³⁰⁹ As new circumstances arise, legislatures should address new issues to ease uncertainty.³¹⁰ English jurist Sir William Blackstone coined the famous legal maxim: “It is better that ten guilty persons escape

²⁹⁵ Master, supra note 292 at 117.

²⁹⁶ See Master, supra note 292 at 120.

²⁹⁷ See Master, supra note 292 at 120.

²⁹⁸ Master, supra note 296 at 120; see also U.S. v. Lewis, 342 F.Supp. 833, 835-36 (E.D. La. 1972) (wrongful imprisonment is compensable).

²⁹⁹ See Master, supra note 292 at 138.

³⁰⁰ See Master, supra note 292 at 138.

³⁰¹ See Master, supra note 292 at 111.

³⁰² See Meyn, supra note 219 at 41.

³⁰³ See supra Part V.

³⁰⁴ See supra Part V.

³⁰⁵ See supra Part V.

³⁰⁶ See supra Part V.

³⁰⁷ See Broach, supra note 11.

³⁰⁸ See supra Part V.

³⁰⁹ Compare TEX. EST. CODE ANN. § 201.051 (West 2014) (if child has intended parents, the child “the child of the intended mother”) with TEX. FAM CODE § 160.754 (West 2014) (intended parents defined as individuals who enter into an agreement providing that the individuals will be the parents of a child born to a gestational mother by means of assisted reproduction, regardless of whether either individual has a genetic relationship with the child.) (the Texas statutes do not account for the unmarried woman who obtains a child through a surrogate mother, since intended parents is plural).

³¹⁰ Id.

than that one innocent suffer.”³¹¹ This sentiment remains in American criminal jurisprudence today.³¹² Although every legal system contains flaws, checks and solutions should be in place for people to seek redress for novel wrongs.³¹³ Even if the wrongs were not perpetrated maliciously or intentionally, people who lose their freedom deserve more options when seeking redemption for both freedom and needlessly lost benefits.³¹⁴

³¹¹ See Alexander Volokh, n Guilty Men, 146 PENN. L. REV. 173, 174 (1997).

³¹² See id. at 176–77.

³¹³ See supra Part V.

³¹⁴ See supra Part V.