

Terms for Continued Support Feb 1, 2011

Note: This document updates the Aug 19, 2010 version.

Besides demonstrating competence in his/her teaching and research assignments, graduate assistants should also demonstrate satisfactory progress toward his/her degree in a timely manner in order to continue receiving financial support from the department. Permission from the graduate advisor is required before signing up for any undergraduate courses.

Students in the following three categories are considered as low performing, and their support will be terminated.

- 1) A Masters student who has been in a Masters program for more than two years without receiving a Masters degree.
- 2) A student who has not taken any of the Ph.D. Preliminary Examinations by the month of June at the end of his/her second full academic year in the department.
- 3) A student with a Masters degree in either Mathematics or Statistics from another institution who has not taken any of the Ph.D. Preliminary Examinations by the month of June at the end of his/her first full academic year in the department.
- 4) A student who has not passed three Ph.D. Preliminary Examinations in four consecutive sittings.

Students in the following categories are also considered as low performing, and they will be put on probation.

- a) Any student who registers for an undergraduate course without the permission of the graduate advisor.
- b) Any student receiving a grade C or lower from a graduate or undergraduate level course.
- c) Any student who has not registered for at least 6 hours in each long semester in accordance with their degree plan. This rule does not apply to those who have already satisfied the course requirements in their degree plan.
- d) Any student who has not chosen a dissertation/thesis/report advisor by the start of their second full academic year.
- e) Any student who is deemed to be incompetent in their teaching assignments. The degree of incompetence is determined through the number and seriousness of complaints and faculty evaluation of their teaching performance.

The probationary period will be two long semesters.

Any student who is on probation is expected to demonstrate satisfactory progress towards their degree in accordance with their degree plan, and demonstrate competence in their teaching assignments during each of the two long semesters. If the student falls under any of the categories a – e during his/her probationary period, then their support will be terminated.

International Teaching Assistants

In addition, an international student who has twice failed the English certification exam for ITAs (International Teaching Assistants) will either be supported for 10 hours, or be unsupported for the following semester/s until they pass the exam, depending on the decision of the graduate advisor.

These rules will be enforced starting from the Fall semester of 2011.
