Thanks are due to: Dr. Andrew Stetson, Director of the School of Music, and Dr. Martin Camacho, Dean of the J.T. and Margaret Talkington College of Visual and Performing Arts, and also to Vernacular Music Center Director Dr. Christopher J. Smith

The Vernacular Music Center at the TTU School of Music, recognized by the TTU Office of the Vice President for Research as an official research center in Fall 2023, provides a locus for in-depth and comparative research, study, teaching, and advocacy on behalf of the world's vernacular musics and dance—their construction, history, and role in defining life in human communities—in all cultures and historical periods. The VMC, which sponsors ensembles, classes, guest artists, and annual and special events, is dedicated to the study of the processes by which expressive culture is taught and passed on within a community, as well as assisting in the ongoing cultivation of arts on the South Plains. Its Executive Committee consists of Christopher Smith, Roger Landes, and Angela Mariani (School of Music), along with Kyla Olson (Dance) and Bill Gelber (Theatre). The VMC partners with community, campus, and other universities' organizations regionally, locally, nationally, and internationally. If you are interested in becoming a member of the VMC's Advisory Board (find a full list of members at vernacularmusiccenter.org), or to speak with any member of the Executive Committee; we would welcome you!
