JOHANNES BRAHMS, Op. 98
(1833-1897)

Mvt. IV, bars 89-105

Suggested tempo: ♩ = c. 66-70

In this wonderful solo of the Romantic period, a large range of dynamics and tonal intensity should be utilized culminating in the climax in bar 101. The tone should always be rich (but refined) with carefully shaped phrases that support the overall architecture of the entire solo.

Erratum: In bar 102, the second staff should begin on the preceding B and include all three notes, based on published scores and the composer's manuscript, a facsimile of which is presented on the facing page. Also note the absence of a p marking at 97 in the manuscript.

The extended solo (beginning in bar 328) should be played with great conviction and energy. Maintain rhythmic stability, clear articulation, and tonal intensity until the last sustained D.

The suggested tempo refers to the main solo at bar 328; the whole notes at 279 are often played slower.
