

History

Stonebriar Country Club, a ClubCorp property that was the first and is still the only private country club in Frisco, Texas, north of Dallas. What started as a neighborhood country club in 1988 with one golf course. In 2000, world-renowned course architect Tom Fazio designed the Club's second phenomenal 18-hole course, resulting in a distinct style of golf in Frisco that allows Stonebriar Members to vary their game.

Offering two gorgeous, world-class Frisco golf courses, the lengths to which Stonebriar has gone to create a superior Frisco golf experience are evident. In its first year, the original Stonebriar Frisco golf course, designed by famed course designers Joe Finger and Ken Dye, received the prestigious honor of being nominated for the "Best New Course in the Nation."

Stonebriar has the privilege of hosting the Byron Nelson Qualifier May 10th.
