OUR MISSION

The School of Theatre & Dance at Texas Tech University fosters the highest standards of scholarship and creative activity and provides opportunities for students to work actively in both areas. We champion training and education in a breadth of specialized programs, encourage students to cross boundaries between them, and prepare students for careers in both practice and pedagogy. By integrating the practical and the scholarly, the school serves as a vital force in the cultural and intellectual life of our society.

THANK YOU
The School of Theatre & Dance 2020/2021 production season is made possible by Texas Tech University and the J.T. & Margaret Talkington College of Visual & Performing Arts.
Our season selection committee met last year, as usual, and came up with a slate of plays, musicals, and dances that we felt were challenging, expansive, reflective of the world around us, and especially pertinent in an election year. We gave this season a theme, The Personal and the Political, based on through-lines we felt connected the plays selected and the dances to be choreographed. Celebrating the season, we even shot our first video, breaking a piñata to reveal the titles.

This was all pre-pandemic, mind you.

In June, we wrote a plan, one we hoped that would allow us to share these works with limited audience members in a reduced, safety-conscious capacity, and that offered our designers a partial build, our actors opportunities to develop characters and serve narratives all the while masked and six-feet apart. We knew these compromises were not ideal, especially for our audiences, but we believe strongly that education is best served by process, and that this season plan was educationally exciting, posing obstacles that our community is intent on creatively overcoming.

But in August, when the COVID numbers in Texas continued to increase, our Acting/Directing and Design areas revised that plan, intent on retaining our emphasis on process but also increasing measures to ensure safety. We were loathe to abandon our live audiences, and just as, if not more, upset to rehearse online. All the time, though, no matter the compromises, we were intent on making certain to privilege education for our students and we knew our audiences would understand.

Our season, The Personal and the Political has, ironically, grown both more personal and political in the last few months. Rather than be constricted by the choices made pre-pandemic, we are embracing what can only be called a fluid season, one that is continuing to evolve based not only on the world around us, but the community within the Maedgen. In an effort truly to respond to our reactions to current events, we have already abandoned some titles, chosen new ones, deconstructed others, and are consistently shifting the means by which we rehearse and share them.

Every personal decision has a political repercussion.

The works you will see this season navigate the muddy waters of the political world in which we live, even more so impacted by our personal journeys. What better way to make sense of the world in which we live than embracing art that explores the consequences of our choices while simultaneously reflecting upon our shared humanity?

This season, we hope you will join us virtually to experience the innovations and creativity of our students and faculty. We promise a season full of surprises, one like no other in the history of our program.

Support our students and innovative programs

A few years ago, we were a Department of Theatre & Dance. Now we are a School. What does this mean?

We increased commitment to our students by significantly growing our emphasis on experiential education, so much so that we now bring in over 35 professional guests a year to educate our students. And, in turn, we send our students all over the world.

Through national and internationally-recognized programs such as WildWind, the Arts in Prague, the Marfa Intensive, and the Tennessee Williams Festival, and partnerships with schools in Hong Kong and Turkey, we further introduce our students to the professional world of theatre and dance.

Contributions to the Producers Circle are instrumental in helping us bring the world to West Texas, and introduce the world to the talent here in Lubbock.

Please think about contributing to our program.

Rest assured, your money will facilitate the next generation of artists through scholarships and innovative program-building, making TTU one of the best universities to promote excellence in the United States.

The Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival, part of the Rubenstein Arts Access Program, is generously funded by David M. Rubenstein.

Special thanks to The Harold and Mimi Steinberg Charitable Trust for supporting the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts’ Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival.

Additional support is provided by The Honorable Stuart Bernstein and Wilma E. Bernstein; and the Dr. Gerald and Paula McNichols Foundation.

Kennedy Center education and related artistic programming is made possible through the generosity of the National Committee for the Performing Arts.

This production is entered in the Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival (KCACTF). The aims of this national theater education program are to identify and promote quality in college-level theater production. To this end, each production entered is eligible for a response by a regional KCACTF representative, and selected students and faculty are invited to participate in KCACTF programs involving scholarships, internships, grants and awards for actors, directors, dramaturgs, playwrights, designers, stage managers and critics at both the regional and national levels.

Productions entered on the Participating level are eligible for invitation to the KCACTF regional festival and may also be considered for national awards recognizing outstanding achievement in production, design, direction and performance.

Last year more than 1,500 productions were entered in the KCACTF involving more than 200,000 students nationwide. By entering this production, our theater department is sharing in the KCACTF goals to recognize, reward, and celebrate the exemplary work produced in college and university theaters across the nation.
