

New Faculty Tips

This list is intended to assist you with the transition into your new teaching position at Texas Tech University and becoming a part of a new community. While the list is not comprehensive, it will help you and provide helpful reference points. Specific information on department, school, or college-specific requirements should be available through your department chair, department business manager and college Dean's Office.

What to look for first:

1. Email: Information will be emailed directly to you during the summer - This information will include information regarding eRaider set up, how to obtain the University ID and parking, as well as information on Blackboard access, creating a syllabus and more!
2. Online Resources: We have asked several of the departments who generally present within a 10-minute time frame on the day of New Faculty Orientation to create online resources instead. These will be added to our current New Faculty page for you to access based on your needs and convenience.
3. Compliance Training through Cornerstone: There are several training modules that are standard requirements for all new faculty. These self-paced, online modules will be the compliance related training generally included in NFO, such as EEO, Title IX, Ethics, NCAA Compliance, and FERPA. Information on how to access these will be sent out by Molly Jacobs during the summer.

Preparing for New Faculty Orientation:

4. Face-to-Face Workshops the week of NFO: These optional workshops are designed to provide you with important information that you will need in the first 30 days of your employment and prior to the start of classes, including sessions about employee benefits. Please note that there will be a video about benefits that you will need to view prior to attending the Q & A session. A Blackboard Q & A with one on one assistance from an instructional designer will also be available. A session on what to do the first day of class, on transparent assignment design and rubric development will also be offered. It is strongly recommended that you attend the sessions most tailored to your needs. Please remember that your benefits must be set up in the first 30 days of your employment.
