Discussion:

Teaching Evaluation Initiative Committees

Council members gave updates on their work in the Teaching Evaluation Initiative.

-Department Teaching Plans: David shared that Angela Lumpkin has taken the lead this year. A model was given from Kinesiology & Sport Management and David and Angela visited various departments who were interested. Six departments agreed to create a teaching plan, three are still moving forward with their plans.

-Peer Observation: Karen shared that a survey was sent to Department Chairs and Associate Chairs. They plan to meet to discuss the data to make decisions and move forward.

-Self-Reflection: Lisa shared that they are considering questions like how this differs from assessment, how long and how often should self-reflection occur, when should this take place during the semester, and how does this differ from the self-assessment in Faculty Success. They plan to lead focus groups this year to discuss these questions further.

-Student/Course Evaluation: Suzanne and Mike Serra have been meeting each month and the committee has thirteen participants. They gathered faculty and student responses in a survey and hope to attempt a trial with a revised evaluation that is vetted by stakeholders. Student announcement emails have been rewritten and there will be an official evaluation week to avoid constant emails throughout the semester. Areas still have the ability to use SmartEvals to customize based on the department and the revised questions are evidence based and generally apply to all areas.

The initiative is a three to five year project and the committee leaders brief the President and Provost on annual progress.

Workshops related to Trust, Connection, and Belonging

Lisa shared with the committee two upcoming events related to this year's vision. Amy Flowerree will be leading a session about trust and the news in January at the TLPDC.

Tea & Teaching will take place November 4th and 29th at the TLPDC. These won't have a strong agenda and will be a casual time for faculty to discuss their teaching.
